Is high school a game
for all to play,
a gamble to win
from the very first day?
Is it rolling the dice
hoping for success,
shooting "honor roll sevens," trying for the best?
Is it playing the right card
a popular ace,
a lucky jack,
a jokers smiling face?
Or is it a wager in learning

Is it a game to discover

Greenhorns invade corridors of GBHS

Armed with a pile of notebooks, gym clothes, schedules, erasers, school rosters, and anticipation, the sophomores and new teachers invaded the halls of Great Bend High School. Sophomores proceeded to be caught in the whirlwind of the start of a new school year. New teachers proceeded to learn their way around new surroundings and the names of their students.

Together they attempted to put their mark into the unforgotten history pages of GBHS. Confronted with representatives from every club and organization, sophomores soon learned who was who and what was what. Teachers also learned what clubs and organizations did to benefit the school, the school they soon came to know and understand.

"Live and learn" should be the motto of every sophomore and new teacher. The often overwhelmed newcomers heard cries of learn this, do that, and pay for this. It seems as if the excitement lasts for many of them throughout the year.

Keeping a busy schedule, sophomore Biology instructor Alan Fahring prepares for his students a daily session of valuable discussion.

Checking papers is a frequent job for new teachers. Mrs. Diana Gowdy, English II teacher, devotes many hours finding sophs' errors.

Students await future, new horizons sought while traditions linger.

Sophomores soon embarked on a barrage of number learning: locks and locker numbers, book numbers, folder numbers, and club numbers. "Getting involved" on the first day of school, sophomore class officers were elected at a special assembly.

Anticipating for the future, their first money making project was a concession stand at the Pratt game.

The class of 1974 proved to be high-spirited at the 1971-1972 Football Homecoming parade, when they carried a Mickey Mouse banner, to symbolize their role as the ever-traditional Mickey Mouser.

For new teachers, GBHS was a wide open sea. Day by day they became acquainted with a new high school life. From fighting the smoke in the faculty lounge to picking out the biggest rolls for their early morning snack, new teachers learned from experience. They fought a losing battle as they vainly struggled to understand the pattern behind the ringing of the bells as students passed from class to class. When that pleasant voice interrupted a class discussion, new teachers learned not to frown when they heard, "May I have your attention please?"

Mrs. Alice Humphreys, English III teacher, signs out after a tiring day.

Mrs. Crystal Cross, English II teacher, finds joy in taking the daily roll.

Mr. John Thorton finds Constitution a very good discussion topic.

Team sports winning pride while students add spirit

At the start of the pigskin season, a new head coach and a new style of football action and team spirit dominated the school atmosphere. As coaches worked with the team's pride, Pep Club and Band generated spirit within in the student body.

Being rich in coaching experience from Ottawa and Kansas State University, Head Coach Sherm Price worked hard to develop a proud, hard-hitting, 100% effort football squad out of the 96 players reporting for the first practice. He tried to instill with the team the habit of never letting up. He introduced the Top and Bad Cat awards to honor the best offensive and best defensive player of each game.

The fans saw a new style of football action characterized by spirited players. With an abundance of quick, tough and dedicated running backs, Great Bend developed a formidable ground game operating out of the wishbone formation.

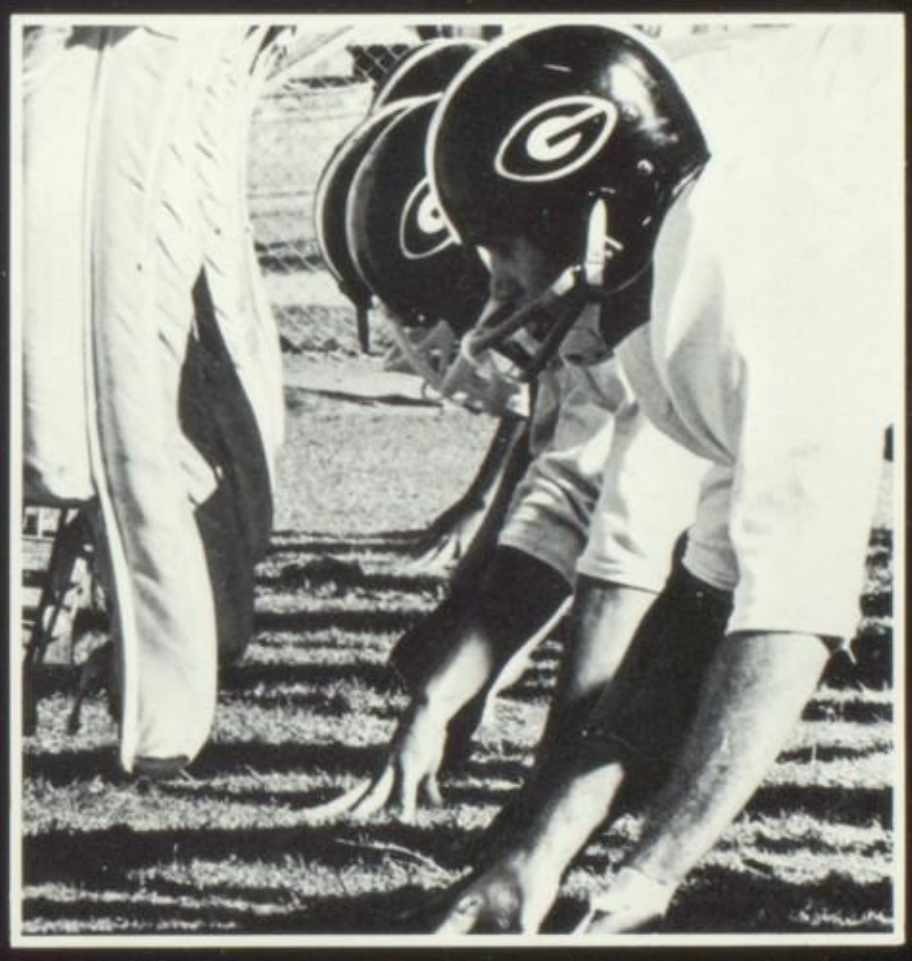
Assigned to specific coaching jobs were Coach Price, receiving; Coach Gowdy, defense; Coach Cochran, offense; Coach Farhing, backfield; Coach McPhail, trainer; and Coaches Waggner and Lambert, sophomores.

As the squad worked daily in practice, Pep Club, guided by Mrs. Bettie Nebergall, used their energies in skits, locker decorations, posters, and pep rallies. And the band, under the direction of Mr. Joe Boley, occupied the practice field each morning as they drilled to perfect their half-time performances.

With wet heads and cold toes Pep Club still generates a fighting spirit.

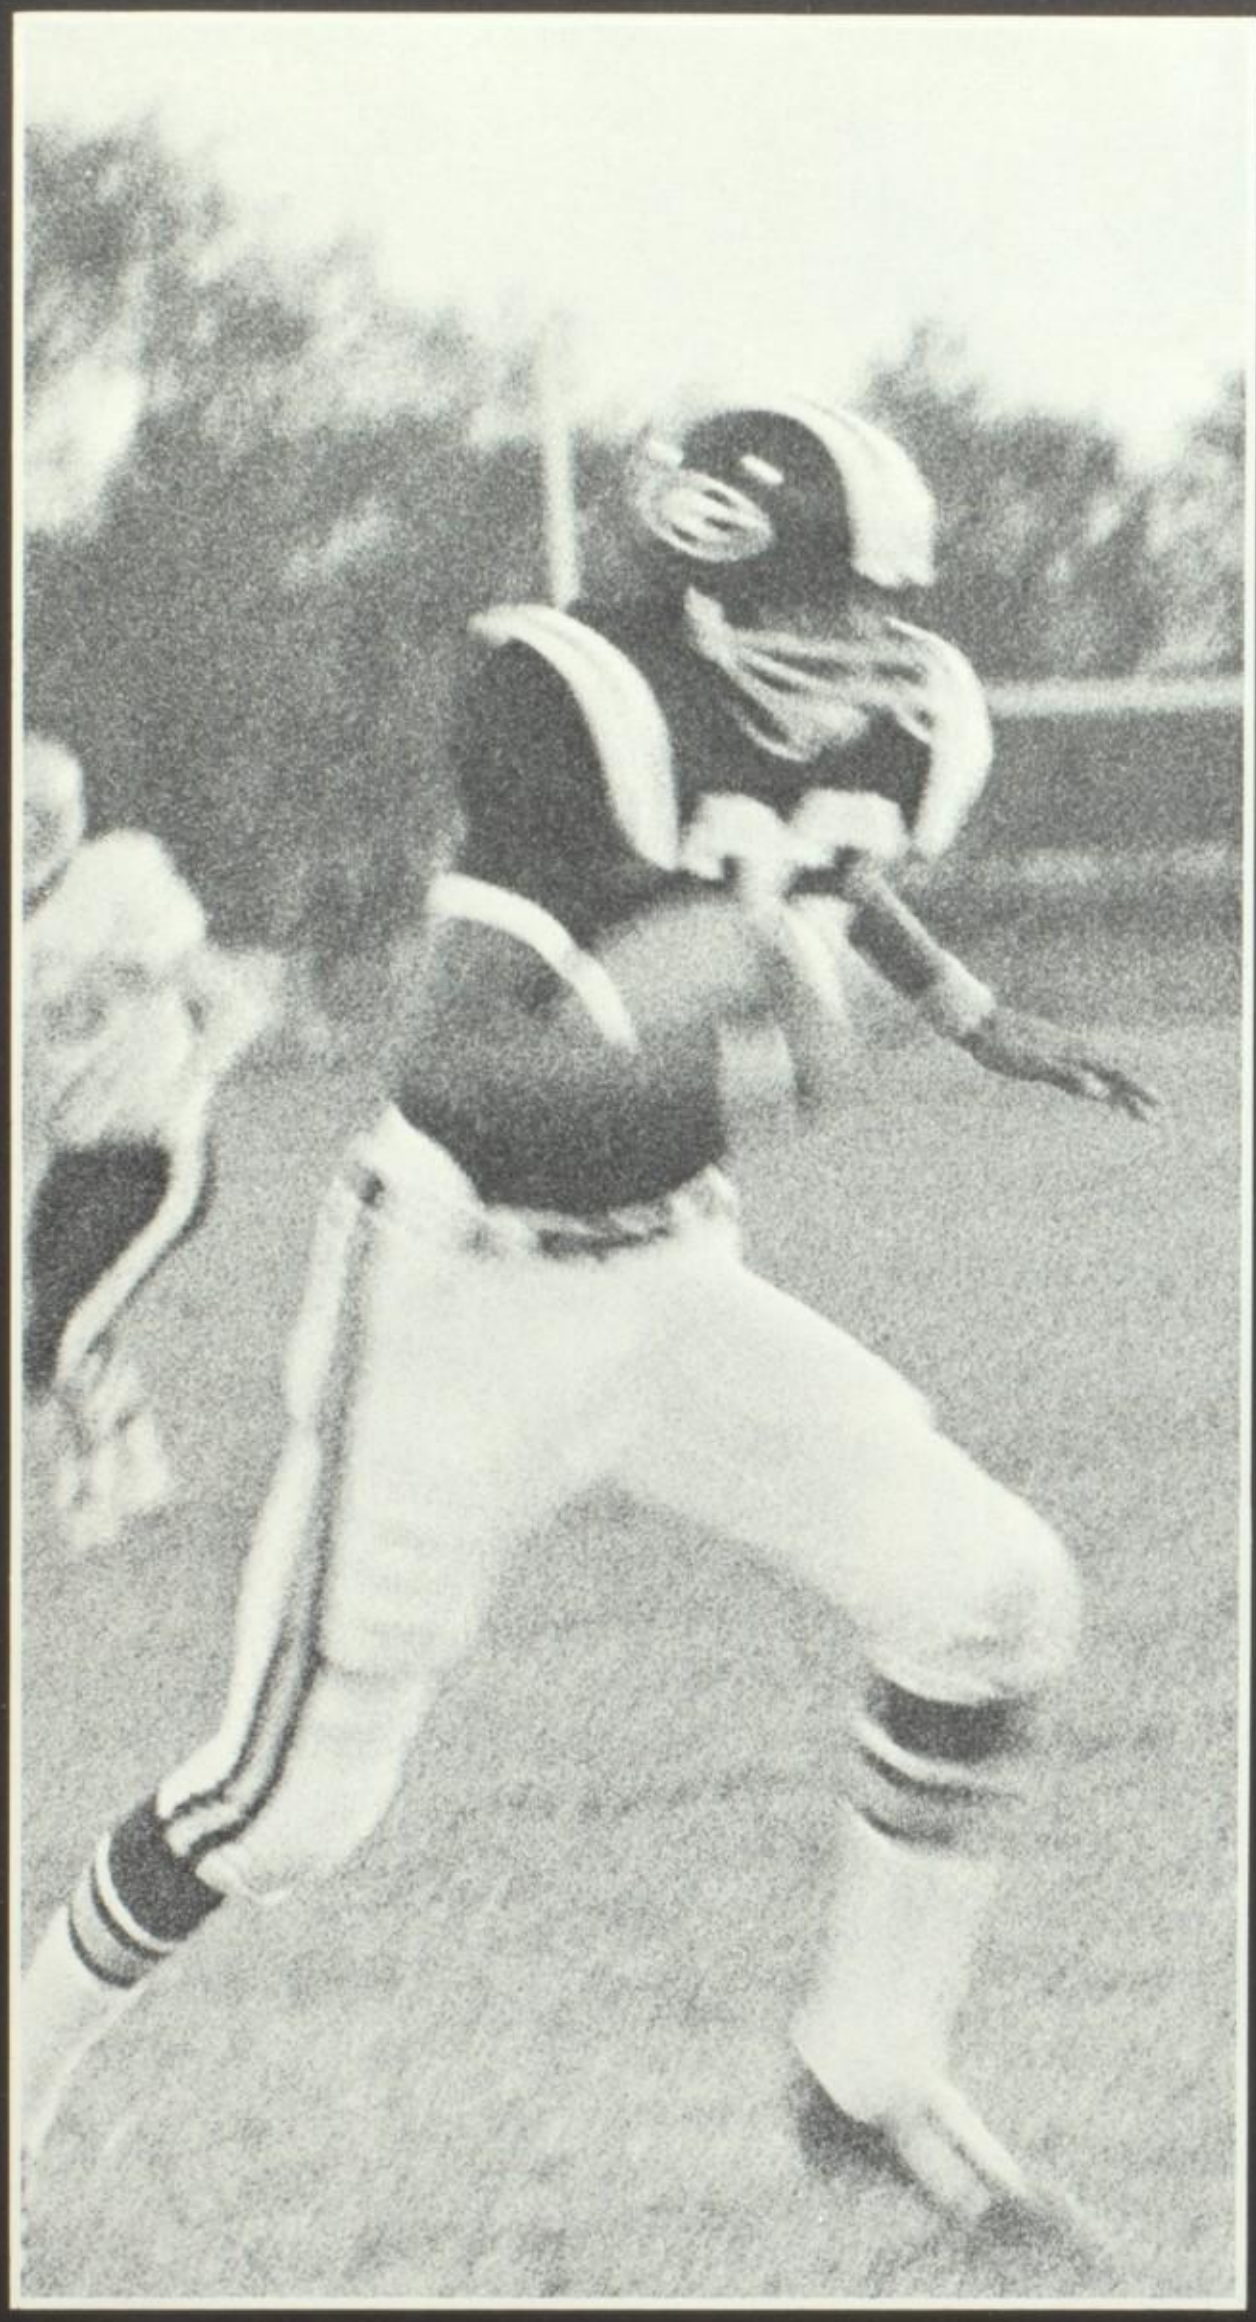
Debbie Robinson, Krista Roberts and Mary Law swing in time with the Black Panther Marching Band.

Hard-running Jr. half-back Eddie Condit pounds the turf in an effort to gain better field position.



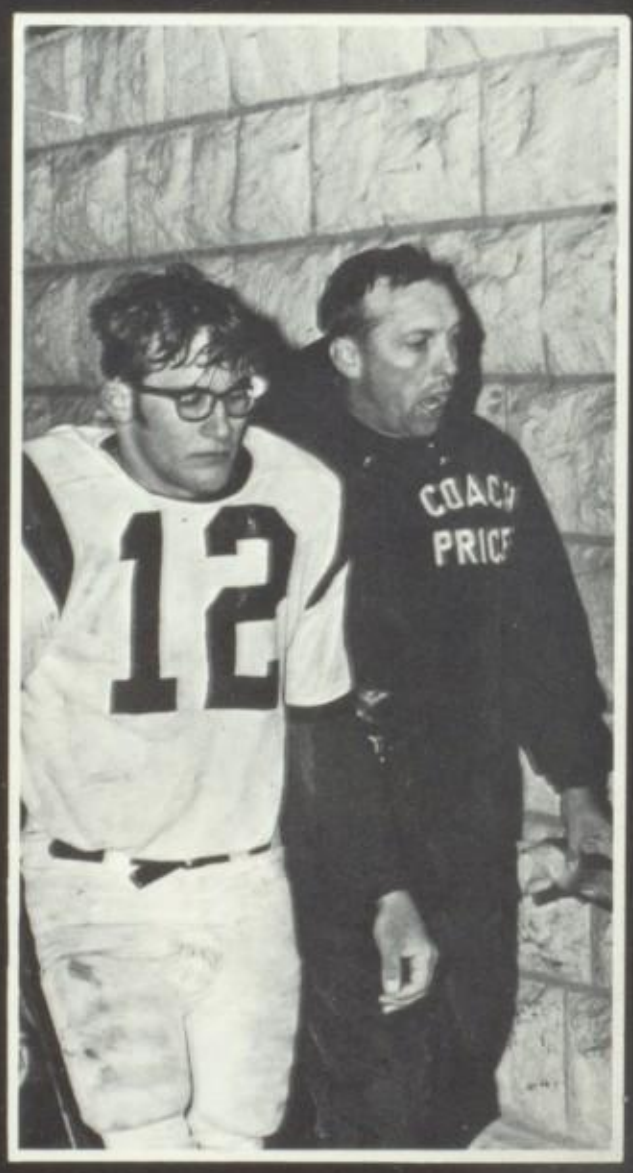
Eager Panthers crouch in anticipation as they ready themselves for that first all important slash at the practice sled.

Two pre-season hopefuls battle it out in front of the eyes of their competition.



Fleet footed Danny Nobles prances for a first down in the opening game against the Liberal Redskins which Great Bend lost 28-14.

A different twist to the football spirit is provided by the Pep Club in a unique skit.



Head Coach Sherm Price and quarterback Steve Montgomery trudge back to the locker room while trying to understand how they could have lost the Hays game.

The sound-power emerging from Brad McPherson's sousaphone heartily echoes throughout Memorial stadium during a half-time show at a home game.

Team spirit is questioned through long season but panthers still try

The Black Panther's season opener with Liberal was almost over-shadowed by a misunderstanding between the two schools caused by local papers claiming the Liberal band was prohibited from performing at the game. The Liberal band was never invited and all matters were soon solved by both school's administrations as the press was playing up the feud.

Liberal was rated in the state 4A top ten throughout the year and the Panthers found the going rough as they were defeated 28-14. Great Bend was able to score with difficulty while Liberal easily scored all their points in the first half. The Panther defense stiffened during the second half and stopped the Redskins cold but the Panthers could not sustain successful offensive drives.

Against Hays, then rated 6th in 4A, a question of a closely called play entered into the picture and though many people feel that Great Bend actually scored a touchdown, the Panthers wre defeated 7 to 0.

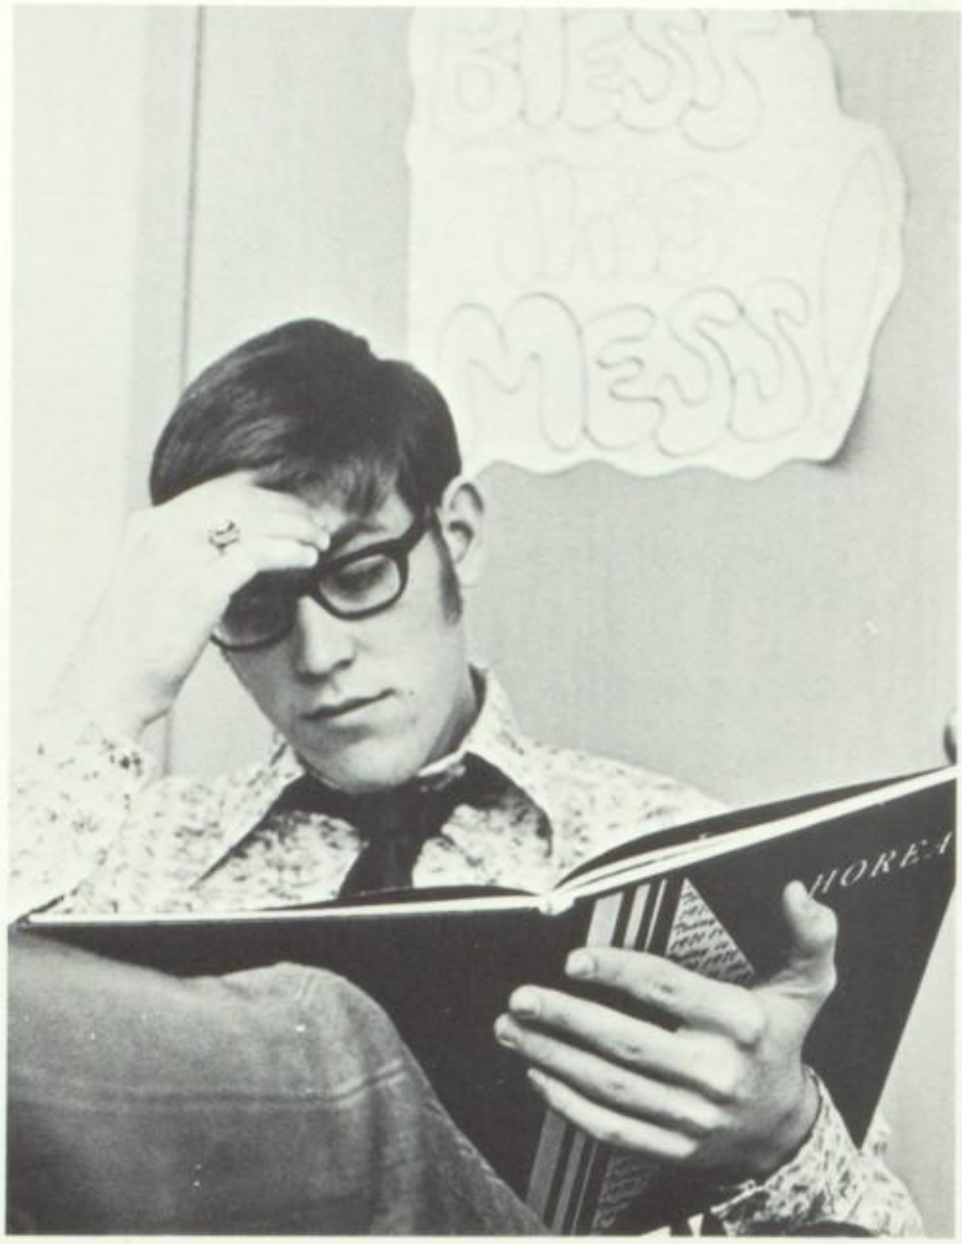
Ranked 3rd in 3A, a strong Pratt eleven defeated Great Bend 12 to 0, even though the Panthers amassed more first downs than their opposing rivals.

Although Great Bend had lost the first three games of the season the school spirit remained intact as the Panthers prepared for Thomas More Prep.

Creative students feel immediate involvement

Immediate involvement is experienced by the students taking part in Journalism and Music Departments at Great Bend Senior High School. A true dedication by students must be present to ensure that a finished product is ready on time. For the Great Bend High School Band, this means early morning practices, blowing hair, and cold hands in the preparation for football half-time entertainment. Under the direction of Mr. Joe Boley, the band practices to produce an outstanding sound, accompanied by a marching presentation. As the year progresses, the Journalism Department swings ahead full force to keep the students informed on events taking place in and around the high school.

Stew Brann, feature editor of Panther Tales, looks at Editor Jill Hewitt as she helps edit his story.



Rhorea Editor John Martin browses through the 1971 yearbook, thinking over some of his past experiences.

Drum Major Larry Branch helps Mr. Joe Boley add soul in directing.

Dan Mason, Carla Klepper, Kevin Wiles, Scott Herren, Stew Brann, and Gary Basgall, strive for perfection as they march and play at once.

To produce the sights and sounds of a great marching band, members spend many hours of hard daily practice to learn all their music.

Mr. John Mohn helps Junior Gwen Frazier write a Journalism I story.

Sitting in mixed positions, the A Capella Choir adds finishing touches on the music for their fall concert. Under the direction of Mr. Philip Szajnuk, selections ranged from classical to popular literature.

Madrigals do their thing by practicing for their upcoming concert.

Dressed in a Panther Tales, Rhorea Baby supervises over her new staff.

Panther Tales guards Dennis Habiger and Brett Hall collect editor Mary Keenan's late fee for missing the weekly Wednesday morning meeting for the staff editors.

Rhorea Staff members Gena Gunn, Stephanee Bates, Susan Fischer, Cindy McDorman, Annie Polson, and Pam Harris, spend long hours during teachers meetings weekend, trying to complete some unfinished work.

Choir, Band, Journalism set high standards

The Panther Tales Staff, composed of select students, worked around the clock in order to publish their first issue of Panther Tales. Both Panther Tales and Yearbook Staff continued the tradition of working before and after school in order to meet deadlines. Often staff members could be found working during the late hours of the night.

For the students involved in publications, the year began during the summer, as many staff members went to newspaper and yearbook workshops throughout the state. These workshops gave the students a preview into what lay ahead on the publishing staff. The Journalism I class, designed to give juniors their first taste of what Journalism is all about, also presents Mr. John Mohn, Journalism instructor, with an insight to the journalism capabilities of upcoming students.

The A Capella Choir started its year in preparation for its first fall concert with the direction of Mr. Phil Szajnuk. Choir is made up of a select group of juniors and seniors who combine to put on a number of concerts throughout the year.

A new dimension was added to the music department this year, with a new select group, called Mixed Ensemble. This group sings a wide variety of songs from old favorites to modern pop tunes. Through the passing seasons, the departments can be seen developing their talents and expressing them through their music and the printed word.

Girls dominate WCKL
Pep Club sets posters

In the midst of the football fanfare a small group of feminine athletes were quietly establishing their dominance over the WCKL. Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Nancy Carleton, the girl's tennis team won all their seven matches, beating opponents by a seventy-nine to twenty-two point spread for an undisputed WCKL champsionship. The B-team won also all their four matches for an undefeated season.

Pep Club helped to boost school spirit for the football team during this time by putting signs in each football player's locker urging them to "crown" the Monarchs, "stomp the buffaloes," and "Salify Salina Sentral."

She-Shark members Rhonda Schenk and Kathi Skolaut demonstrate a ballet leg to prospective members, while Karen Wright shows a warm-up exercise.

During an early season pep assembly the spirit is ignited by the first few; slowly building to a trembling rumble, the cheering section expands, and finally exploding in a deafening roar as the gym fills with an enthusiastic student body.

Junior letterman Ellen Komarek crouches in a defensive position as she displays the winning form that baffled her opponents.

Football team wins Prep game at Hays

The football team didn't let the Pep Club down, either, when they won at Hays against the Thomas More Monarchs, in a much appreciated and long awaited for first win. A week later, Panther fans traveled to Garden City to watch a live buffalo ridden around the track, a homecoming queen crowned, and their team wage a close, but losing battle to the top WCKL team.

Traveling to Salina Central the next week, supporters watched their team unable to score within the 5 yard line as the last seconds in a truly frustrating game ticked away.

During this time of discouraging losses, the Pep Club, the Panther Booster Club, and the town found new and imaginative ways to show their loyalty and support.

Nancy LaGasse slams the ball showing the energetic style that kept the girls' tennis team undefeated.

Pep Club officers Lynette Petz, Debbie Keller, Lexie Pugh, and Debbie Knipe display winning spirit along with winning smiles.

Mrs. Nancy Carleton and officers Jeanne Karst, Gena Gunn, and Annie Polson discuss plans in anticipation of She-Shark tryouts.

After the exciting victory over Russell, Teri Engle enthusiastically congratulates Terry Wilkerson.

Sharks prepare early as FFA busy at games and sophomore swim

Along with discovering the swimming pool, the sophomores found out about sore muscles, bathing caps that didn't work, and wet, stringy hair.

But there was a group that had known about the pool for quite a while: the She-Sharks. Started in 1954, this club for syncronized swimmers was being organized at this time. With Mrs. Nancy Carleton as advisor, the members started swimming early in preparation for the show later on in the spring. Tryouts were held in the third week of November.

At all home games, members of the football team weren't the only ones busy, so were the Future Farmers of America. These active members sold pop corn as a money making activity, with the money to be later used on a worthwhile project.

Expressive GB students either produce or perish

Communicative skills acquired throughout your life come to a head as you prepare yourself for the higher expression needed for public speaking and objective writing. Students in debate polish their persuasive techniques of public speaking through diligent preparation and hours of practice and competition. As the debate squad traveled in many different directions, the PANTHER TALES staff learned early the drudgery involved in writing headlines and doing page layouts, and started to independently produce one of the largest bi-weekly papers in the state.

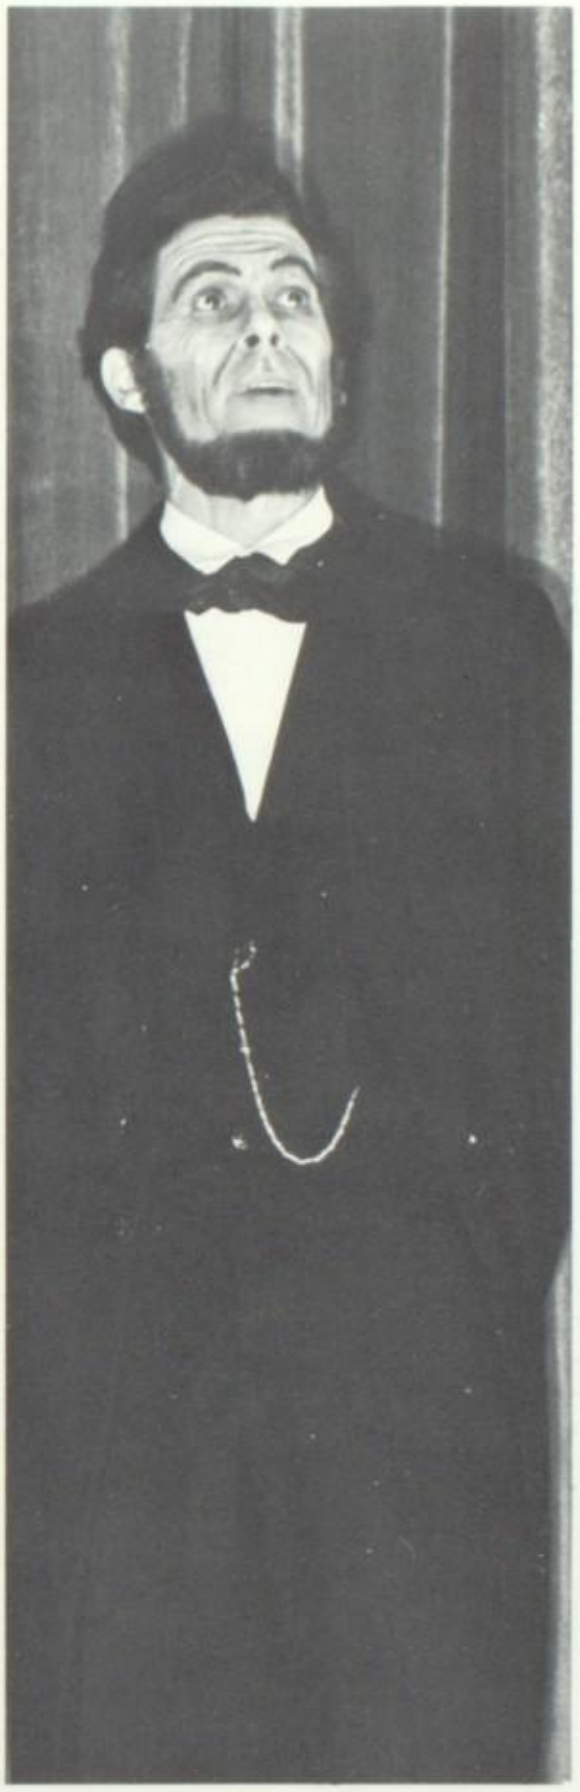
As the 1971 debate season opened the students realized apparent faults of our judicial system. The squad, containing 54 students, worked long hours researching the topic: "Resolved: that the judiciary system of the United States be significantly changed."Coach Richard Young instructed the 32 novices on the techniques and skills involved in competitive debating, and at the same time polished and prepared the 22 experienced debaters. Throughout the season they traveled 10,000 miles to 35 competitive tournaments, 9 of which were cross-x.

The 1971 edition of the GBHS Panther debate squad consisted of 33 novices and 24 experienced.

Lori Brack, novice debater, strives for fluency in speaking.

Debaters Jeanne Karst and Darlene Daubert smile as they connive against their opponent, Jill Miller, as she presents her contentions.

Debaters Sally Streck, Jon Hutchison, Chris Balloun and Jill Miller try to see if their trophy measures up to the title of sweepstakes.

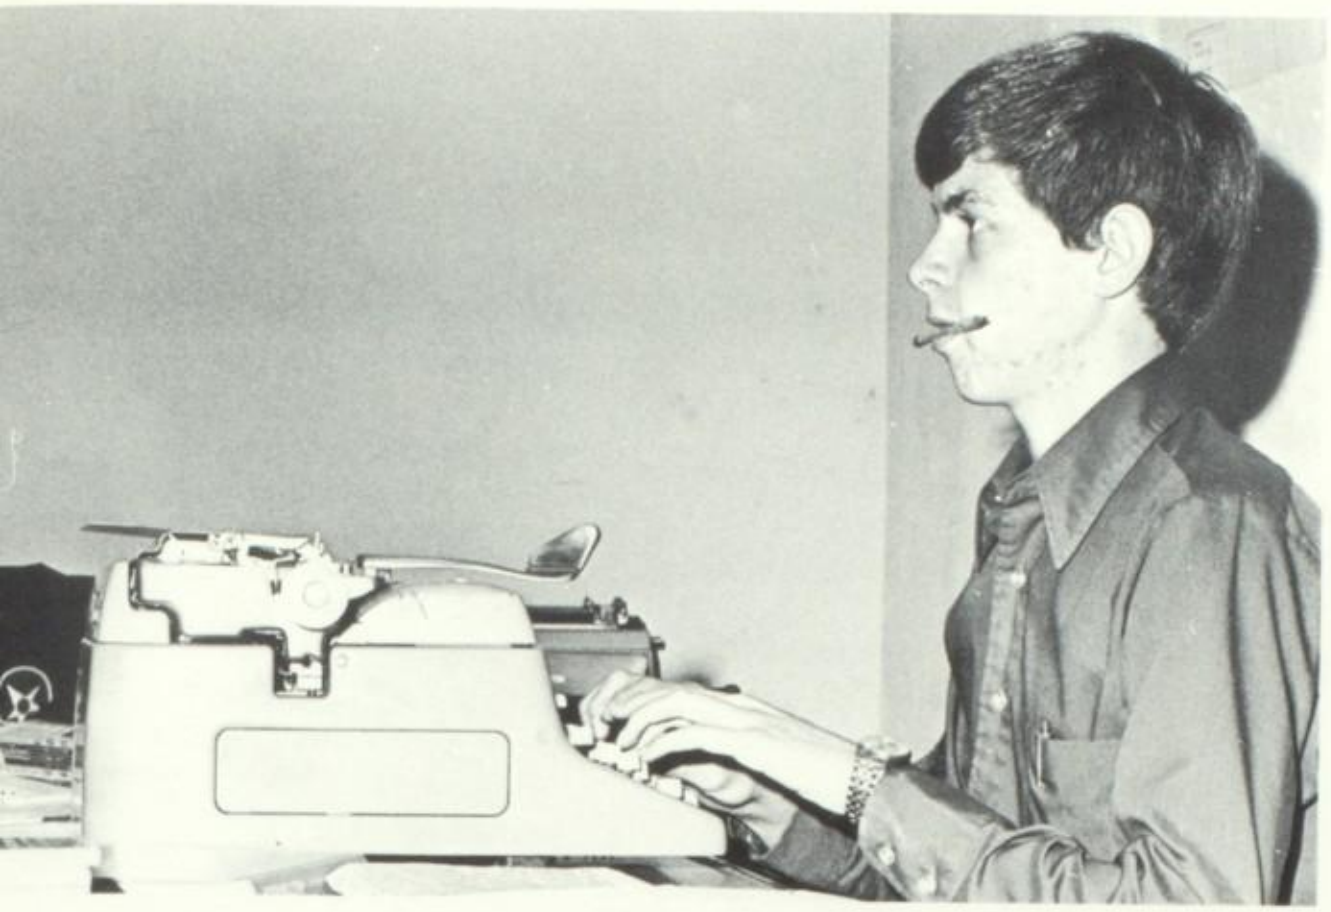


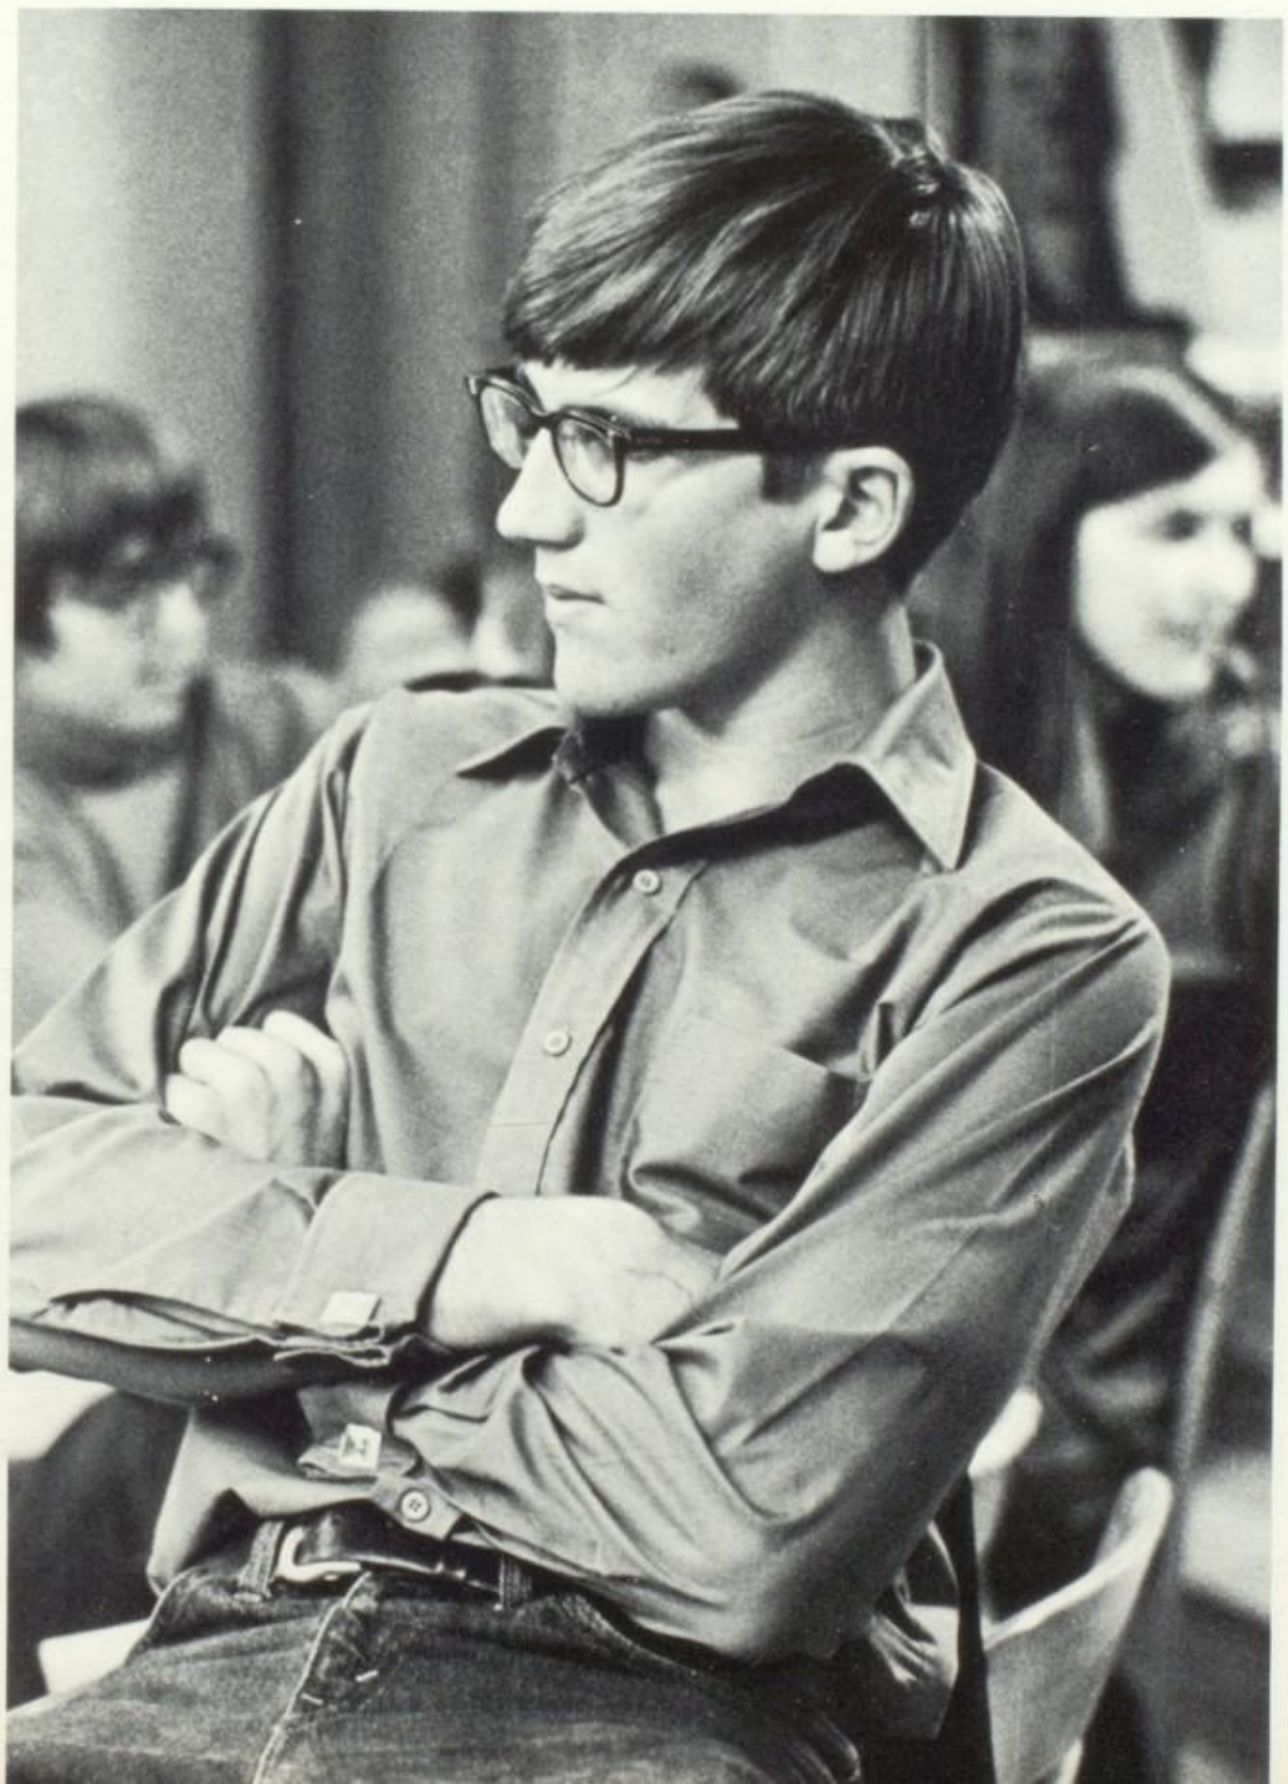
Mr. James Mitchell protrays Abraham Lincoln to show the students the private and unpublicized side of the sixteenth president.

Coach Richard Young, while discussing the upcoming tournament, advised the students on the procedure to get things running smoothly.

Panther Tales editors Stewart Brann and Jon Hutchison seem puzzled.

This year's monitors for Panther Parade, a twenty-five minute radio program, were LuAnne Riegel and Annie Polson, also pictured is Dorothy Peterson, Kent Wade & Krista Roberts.





Debate activities Panther Parade occupy students

Students first begin learning the basics of debate of finding every source the library might have to offer. The necessity of accurate and pertainable quote cards bring the realization that a tournament is near and all must be ready. Cases start flowing out of tired and overworked minds and by the tenth draft the affirmative speech is presentable.

The first tournament of the year brings fear to the novices, excitement to the experienced debaters and high hopes and prayers from the coach. The outcome, whether victory or loss, must be used constructively to improve for the next tournament. Improvement and strict self-discipline is recognized as the norm, and nothing less than 100% is expected.

Panther Parade, a twenty-five minute radio program, reports on the activities of the debate squad regularly, and also covers all activities of the entire school.

As some students invested time in verbal communication in broadcasting, all were able to view professional speakers, such as Mrs. Cleo Dawson, an inspirational speaker and Mr. James Mitchell, who protrayed Abraham Lincoln, during special school assemblies. Impressions, whether good or bad, depend on your ability to communicate, a quality needed throughout your life.

Tom Curzon, chapter president of the National Forensics League, led squad activities with constant guidance.

Is homecoming a package of red and black,
of floats uptown,
and alumni back?
Is it football players
wanting to win,
straining for glory,
all strong young men?
Is it a pep assembly,
with a queen crowned,
and a passionate kiss,
and a victory sound?
Or is it popular kids
and others only dreamers?
Is it a package tied up with crepe paper streamers?

Traditions discarded as football game won

Confusion over changes made in tradition accented the 1971-1972 Football Homecoming. This year each football player nominated three girls by secret ballot for homecoming queen candidates. The entire student body then voted upon these girls. Stuco accepted the responsibility of gaining authorization to activate an old tradition and to organize a homecoming parade. A change from past years in which the queen has been crowned in the gymnasium, this year the queen was crowned in an afternoon assembly at Memorial Stadium following the parade through downtown Great Bend.

Bounding back from the Salina Central defeat, the Panther football squad rounded out the perfect homecoming festivities by defeating the Russell Broncos 28-0.

Leading the way, defensive standout Tony Schartz, prepares to block a Russell tackle, during the home game which Great Bend High won.

Gary Dickson and Ray Downing put the final touches on the student council sponsered Homecoming float readying it for the Friday parade.

After giving the traditional kiss and bouquet to queen Jenny Eckert, Steve Montgomery happily prepares to accompany her off the field.

Panther Paw picked for fall homecoming as traditions change

During Homecoming the sights, sounds, and colors were traditional, and yet a change was ever present. Black and red covered the school as posters were drawn, goal posts were wrapped, and new cheers were learned.

Coaches rooms were decorated with "Panther Paws," which was adopted as the homecoming theme. Activities included the building of a float, a parade down Main Street, and for the first time, an afternoon crowning of the queen.

While the band practiced their traditional numbers and worked mornings to perfect new steps to be performed that night during the half-time, uneasiness was found in class-rooms due to anticipation of evening events, as facial expressions ranged from bubbling smiles to calm rejection.

Organizations are involved at beginning of new year

Through involvement in the various clubs at GBHS, students were encouraged to join in projects and activities, use and develop talents, and learn to work with other club members.

FHA, the Future Homemakers of America, work to improve personal, family, and community living through various projects and activities. The Future Teachers of America encourage students to follow an educational career by introducing them to the many aspects of this field. Students interested in gaining theatrical experience make up the organization of Thespians. French Club, Spanish Club, and the Junior Classical League seek to study and comprehend the customs and social life of foreign countries. Gaining experience in agricultural vocations is the main objective of FFA, the Future Farmers of America.

"Mmm mmm bueno" sing Spanish Club board members, Sherry Murphy, Ann Shull, Cynthia Lloyd, Jan Hamilton, Pam Basgall, and Lyn Peters while presenting a skit.

Members of Thespians, interested in gaining theatrical skills, read through plays during an after-school meeting.

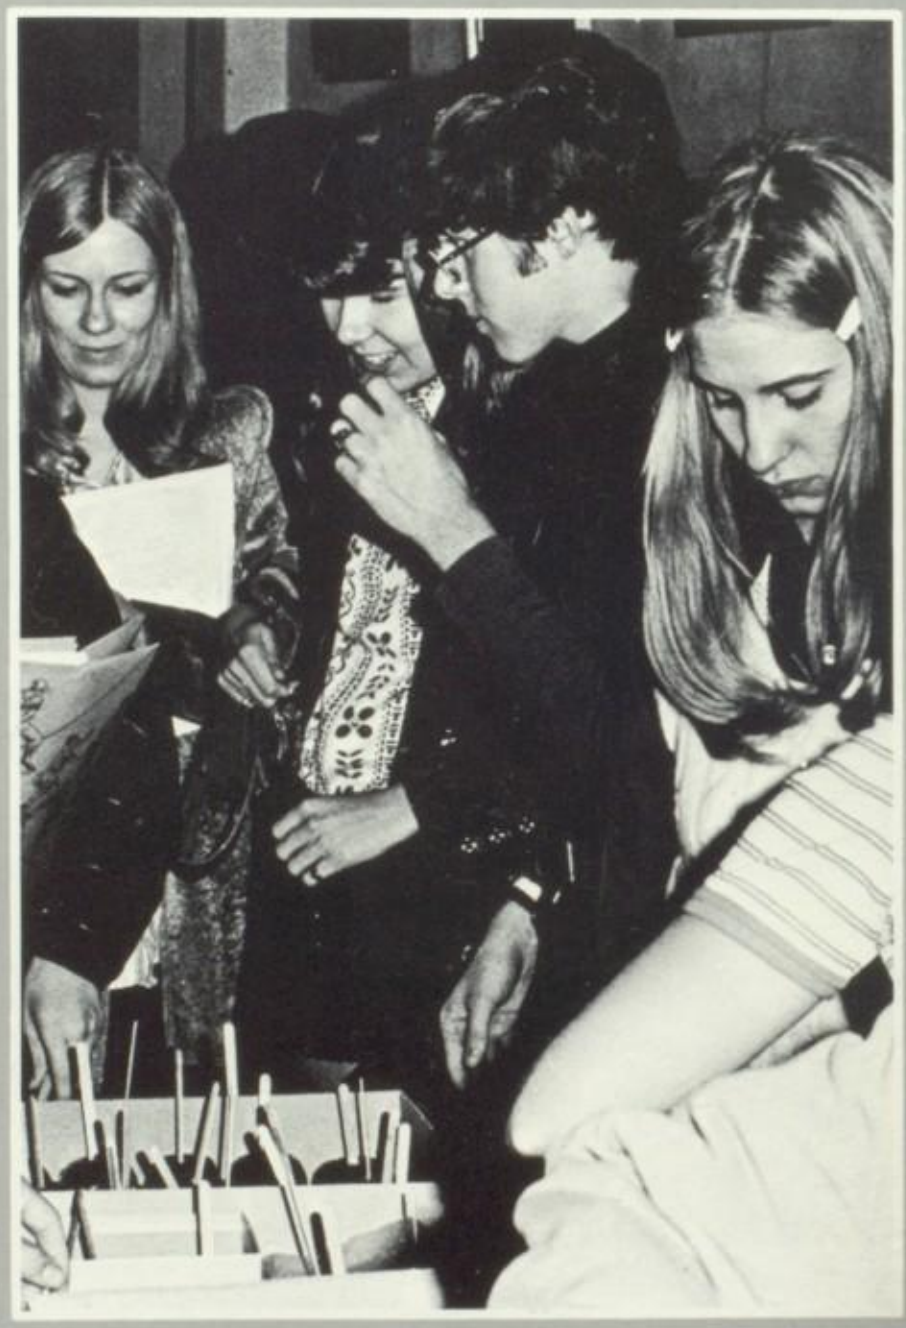
Kayettes hold Powder-Puff
FTA members teach kids

Kayettes, the Kansas Association for Youth, began the year with an early morning breakfast for the new sophomores as a part of their membership drive. In October, board members traveled to Dighton for the Kayette area convention where they gained a better knowledge of their club's goals and ideals. Later in the fall they held their annual holly sales to raise maney for the Holly Ball to be held in December.

Along with the plans for Holly Ball, Kayette members planned and held a Powder-Puff Football Game. After-school practices and the game proved to be enjoyable for both team members and spectators.

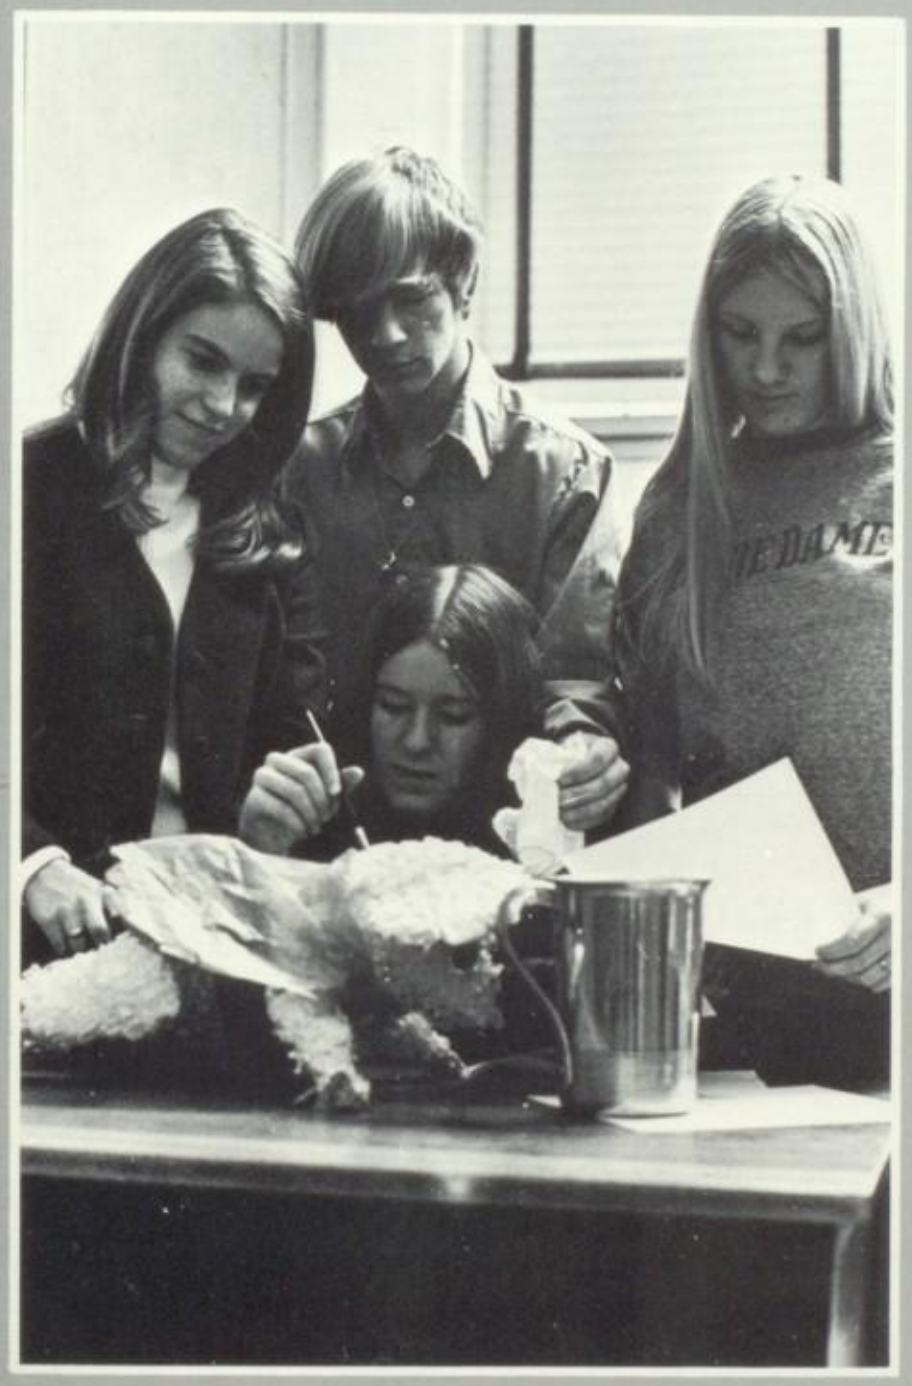
Through FTA, which is under the sponsorship of Mrs. Josephine Trowbridge and Mrs. Barbara Smith, several students were able to obtain a realistic view of the educational field by tutoring at St. Rose School. Other members were involved in fund-raising activities such as bake sales, rummage sales, and caramel apple sales.

JCL officers, Krista Roberts, president; Kevin Keating, treasurer; and board member Kris Balloun, find that being on the JCL board calls for last-minute meetings to make arrangements for upcoming events.



FTA members Lynette Petz and Stew Brann tempt Sue Kluender and Marsha Schamaun with a caramel apple.

Randy Fanshier, FFA president, supervises over the Green Hand ceremony while members Keith Van Skike, Mike Maser, Nick Stremel, Steve Turley, Doug Hejny, Mike Cannon and parents observe.



Spanish Club officers, Sherry Murphy, president; Terry Harbaugh, vice-president; Lyn Peters, treasurer; and Karen Wright, secretary, utilize their artistic talents to create a colorful piñata.

Switching places with the guys, sophomore Glenna Harmony and senior Pam Harris try their hand at football during the Kayette Powder Puff football game.

FHA member Wanda Ritterhouse and her guest, Phil Murray, relax on a bale of hay at the FHA old fashioned Halloween party.

Rhonda Bell, the first Kayette of the month, accepts a gift from president LuAnne Riegel for her outstanding work in Kayettes.

JCL board members and officers portray Gods and Goddesses at the initiation of new members.

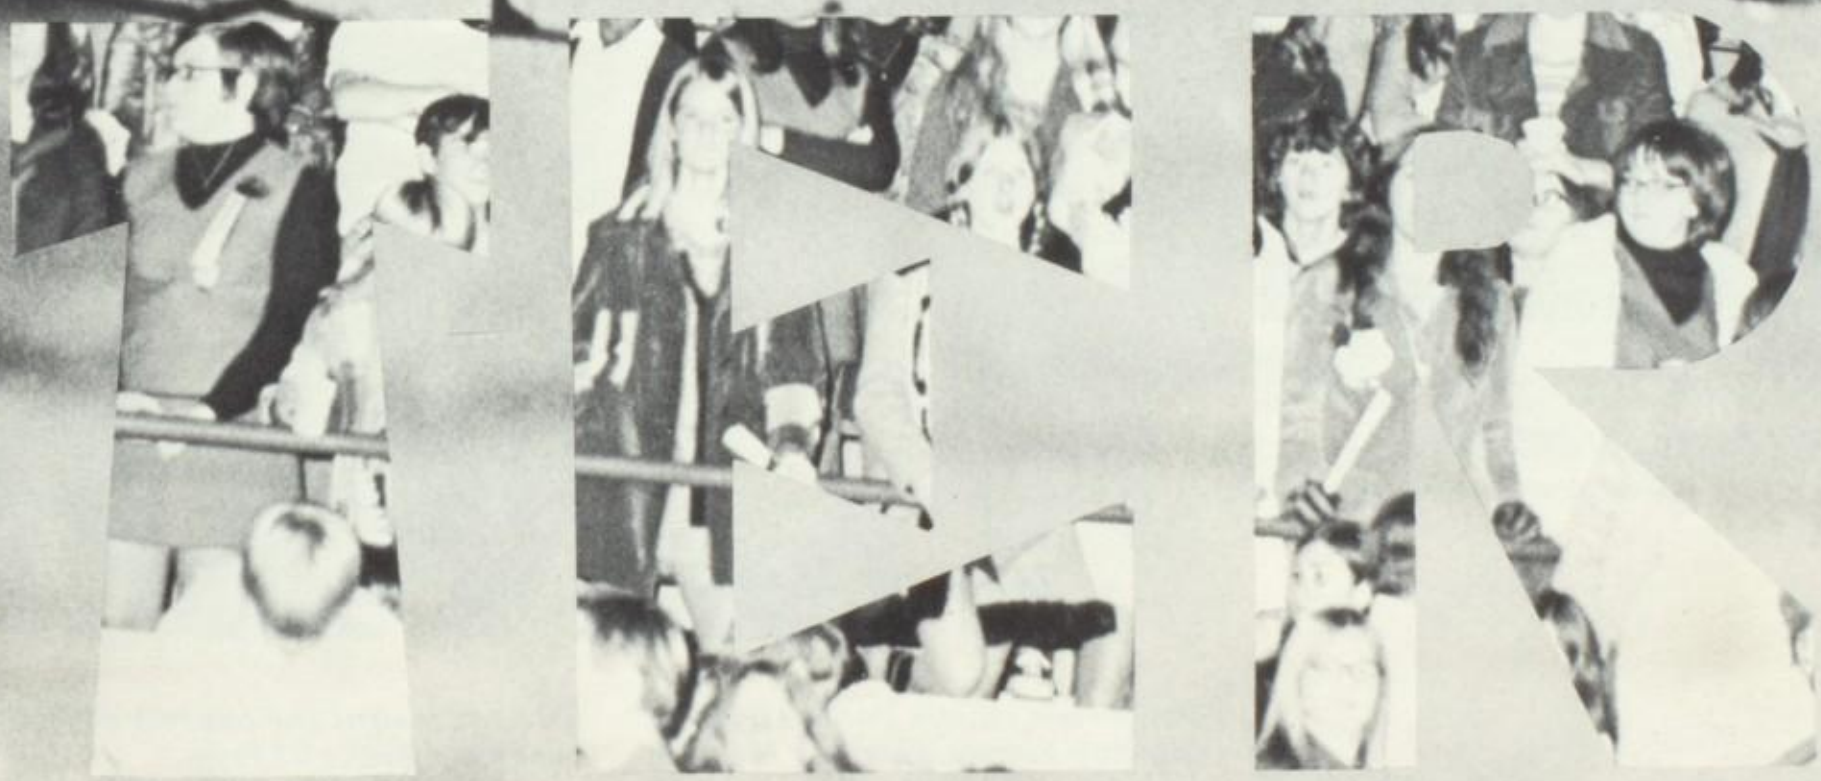
Allyson Terry, taking part in the FTA tutoring program at St. Rose School, teaches students the fundamentals of playing the trumpet.

Skits, speakers and social events make-up highlights of the year

The Language Clubs, French, Spanish, and JCL, kept their members well entertained during the fall with skits, speakers, and social events. These events consisted of a French Club Picnic, a Spanish Club party, and a JCL fun night with an initiation of new members.

The Future Farmers of America held a Green Hand Ceremony in November which prompted second year members to chapter farmers and initiated new members into FFA.

For FHA members fall brought the district conference which was held at Claflin. It also meant trick-or-treating with retarded children and an amusing evening for members and their guests at the old fashioned Halloween Party. In November members contributed to a Thanksgiving basket for a needy family in the community. Under the guidance of Mrs. Blanche Carter this organization continued to make plans for the upcoming Christmas season.

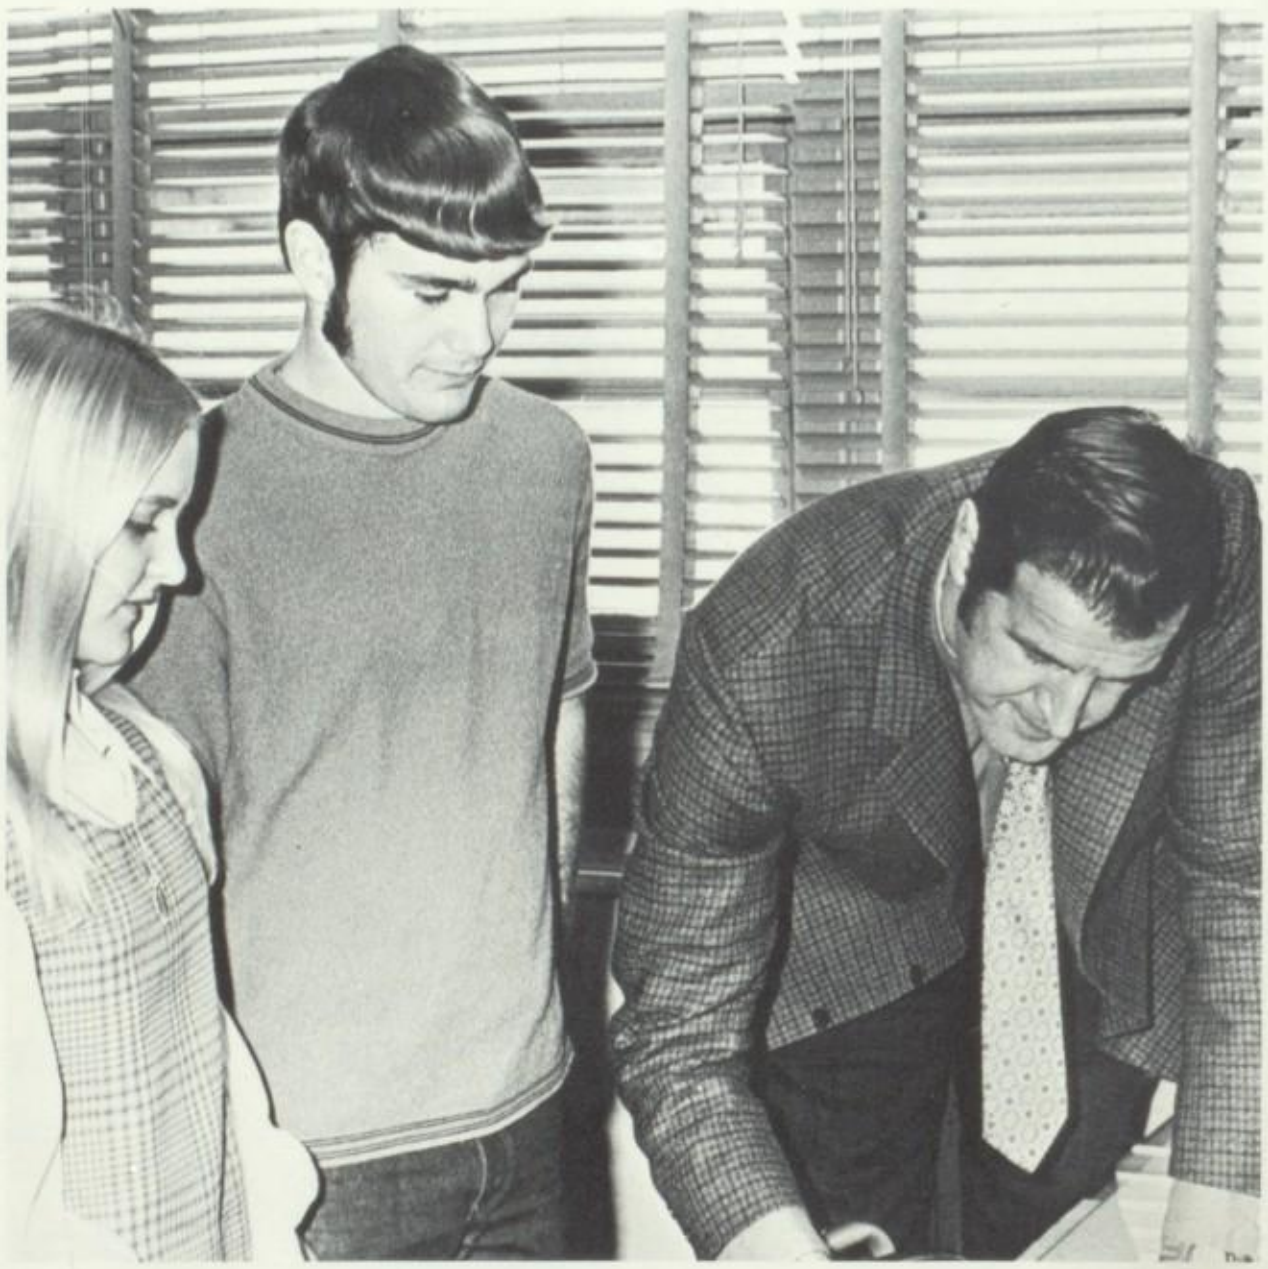


Junior class busy selves in mag. sales and rings

Throughout the 1971-72 school year the junior class busied themselves with varied activities. The junior class president began his duties by initiating the annual magazine sales campaign to earn money for the upcoming Jr.-Sr. Prom, which was promised to be better than ever. Magazine sales got underway with an opening assembly to explain techniques of good salesmanship, to show individual prizes that could be won, and to promote class spirit to enable the juniors to reach their goal of eight thousand dollars.

For some reason, between English III papers and Constitution worksheets, oohing and ahhing over their shiny class rings, and proclaiming that they were the greatest class ever, the juniors seemed to remain very occupied with doing nothing.

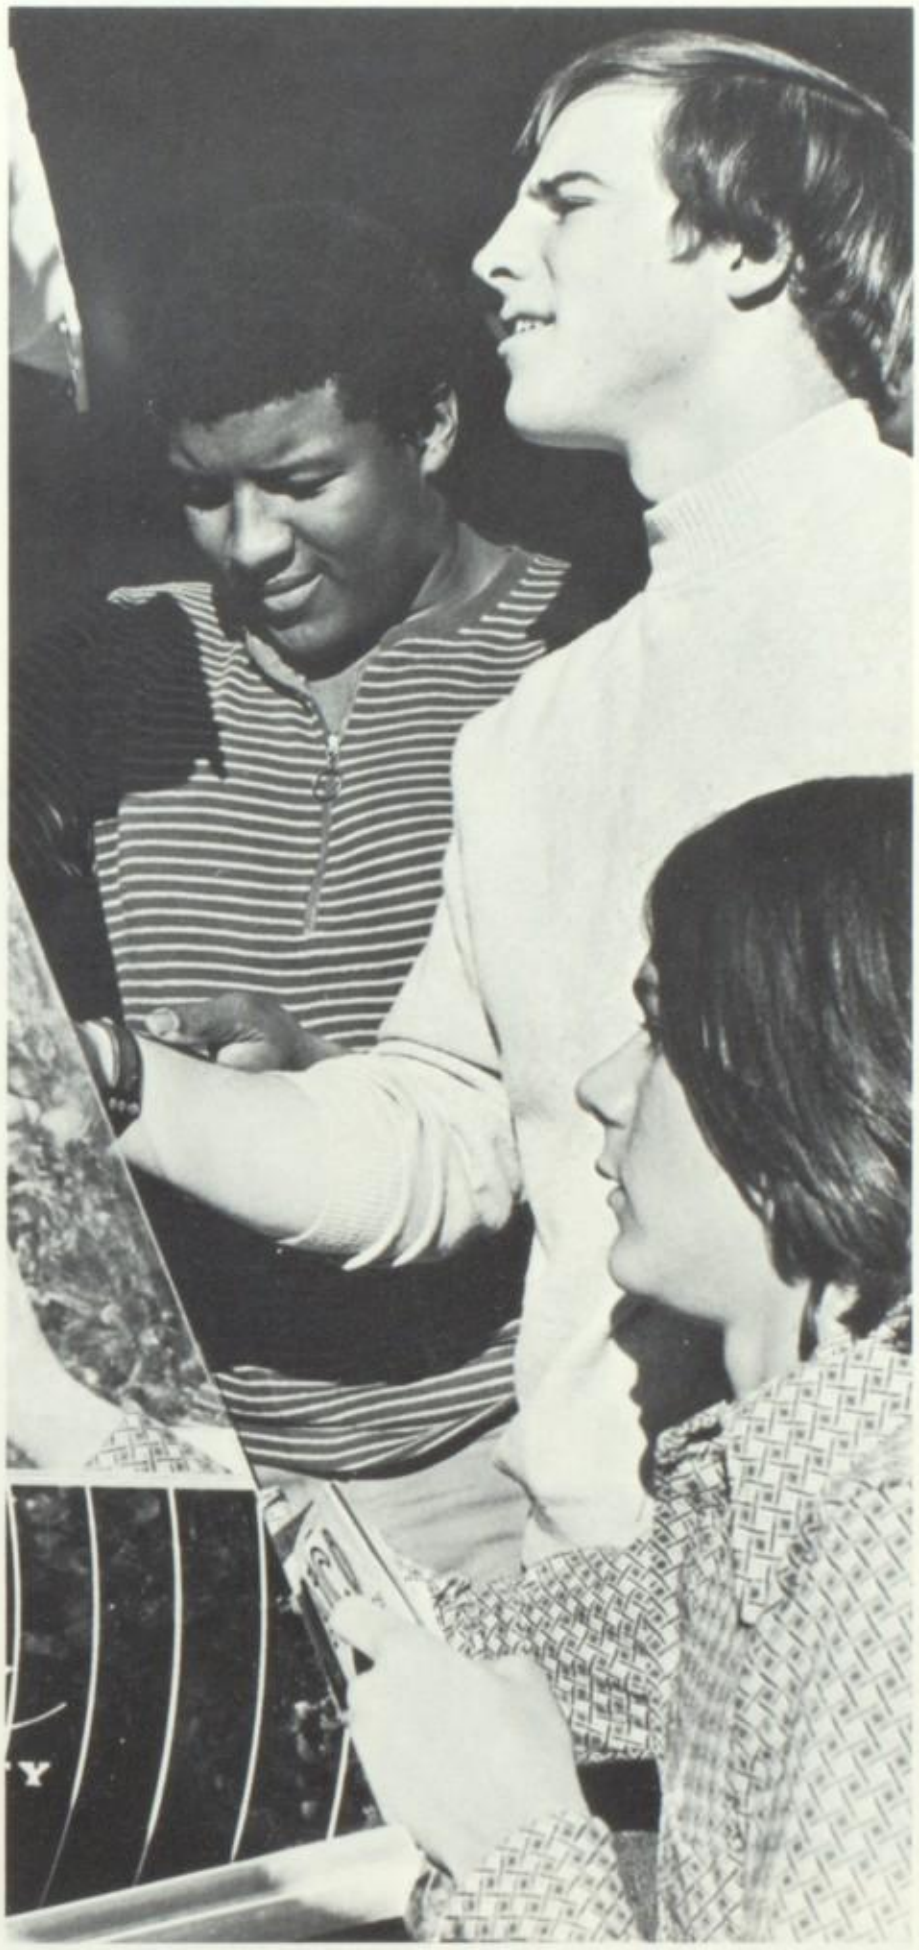
Juniors Steve Felkel, Bill Rich, and Scott Bobbit help back stage.



Junior class officers Darlene Daubert and Bob Fimple watch as Mr. Don Halbower signs the contract okaying the band for the '72 Prom.

Amid all the hard work that goes into a play, these juniors evidently seem to enjoy what they do on the stage as they talk and laugh about funny play scenes.

Behind a gruff exterior, Mrs. Jospehine Trowbridge keeps her students enthusiastic with her dry humor.



Juniors James Emerson, Scott Engleman and Lynn Adams change records, which add to the lunch room noise.

During a scene in the Junior class play, Kevin Keating stresses a point of interest to Rodney Suchy.

Juniors Debbie Miller and Jeanne Lyman help get the play under way as they paint advertisement posters.

"J-J Jun i-i ior JUN-IOR JUNIOR." With having only one year to yell that, they really try to yell it loud.

After sales near goal ring selection made; class play is delayed

After nearly meeting their magazine sales goal, members of the Class of '73 started planning toward that one naustalgia filled evening, Prom, which would drain the class treasury and pocketbooks as well.

Committees were chosen for picking a band, decorating the gymnasium, designing the program booklet, mailing invitations, ordering refreshments, setting up equipment, and cleaning up the mess they left the following morning of the longest night some of them would spend until next year.

With only a few rehearsals under way, Director Emerson MacDonald was admitted to the hospital. Pure chaos resulted as the Junior Class Play, "Hang Up at Generation Gap," was thrown into complete disruption until a new director, Mr. Jim Payne, was recruited.

Anticipation grew each day when 3:08 approached as members of the play cast and crew looked forward to rehearsals. Long, boring winter days gave way to undiscovered talent and undiscovered personalities as practices continued and lines were learned. But as the yearbook deadline drew near, doubt existed as to when the presentation would be made.

Typical Christmas comes as clubs celebrate season

Christmas began this year in the usual way by preparing for parties, shopping for gifts, organizing dances, and practicing for concerts. The students and faculty as well as the clubs got into the spirit of the season by joining in on the Christmas holiday.

Each club and organization was kept busy throughout December with their individual plans. Celebrating Christmas came in the form of FHA's children's party, Kayettes annual Hollyball dance, and A Cappella Choir's Christmas concert. While FFA and Spanish Club gave Christmas baskets to local needy families, Debate, French Club, Journalism Yearbook, and A Cappella Choir partied in homes of their members. FTA members had a first when they partied at the roller skating rink, but the newspaper staff decided to postpone their celebration to meet deadlines.

Is Christmas a holiday
of peace and joy,
of good will and cheer,
for each girl and boy?
Is it church and religion
the coming of Christ,
the saving of man,
salvation without price?
Is it shopping for gifts
bright trees and lights, cards by the hundreds,
playing Santa at night?
Is it a holiday made for us to receive?
Is it a chance to give us all time to believe?
Is it reflections of society where truth is only mirrored?
Is it a masquerade where
Christ wears a white beard?

Anticipating students wait the hectic holiday as vacation approaches

As the anticipated holidays and vacation slowly approached, students and faculty alike learned to accept and endure the hectic days of waiting. Familiar faces from years past were seen in the halls, and the office noted a suspicious increase of daily absences.

One by one we realized the approaching vacation offered us fun, late nights, presents, much-needed sleep, food, more TV viewing time, no homework, parties, relatives, football games, cards, resolutions, skiing trips, last minute shopping, dances, religious services, and hopefully a snowy holiday.

More important than these things, though, some of us discovered the possibility of an eleven day period in which we could find for ourselves the true meaning of Christmas-through all the tinsel.

Floormen and grapplers dominate the winter scene

The end of the football season actually marked the beginning of what could be an exciting basketball season. Under the direction of Head Coach Jim Nebergall, the Panther cagers began pounding the hard woods in an effort to prepare themselves for the season opener aganist the defending 5A state champion Salina Mustangs.

The Panthers had only one returning starter in Senior pivot Willie Reed. A quick glance would indicate that the Panthers would be lacking in experience but the Panthers hoped to display a versatile squad with several Seniors that had already proven their worth as reserves on the 1971 squad. Several quick Juniors, produced by assistant coaches Dale Carpenter and Gerald McPhail, were expected to prove useful throughout the 1972 season.

Wrestlers prepared as basketball victories are difficult to snare

While the basketball team aimed high at the basket, the wrestling squad was also setting their goals. Beginning his third year as mat mentor at Great Bend High, Charles Gowdy put his 50 squad members through rigorous practices in order to build their stamina for the upcoming matches. With the aid of eight starters, the Panther wrestler's looked to be in a properous position for the league championship.

Not to be left out of the rapidly growing school spirit, the Pep Club readied themselves for a fast moving season of winter sports action. Shelving the football cheers, the Pep Club met several times to organize themselves and lend their support to the hard working athletic teams at Great Bend High.

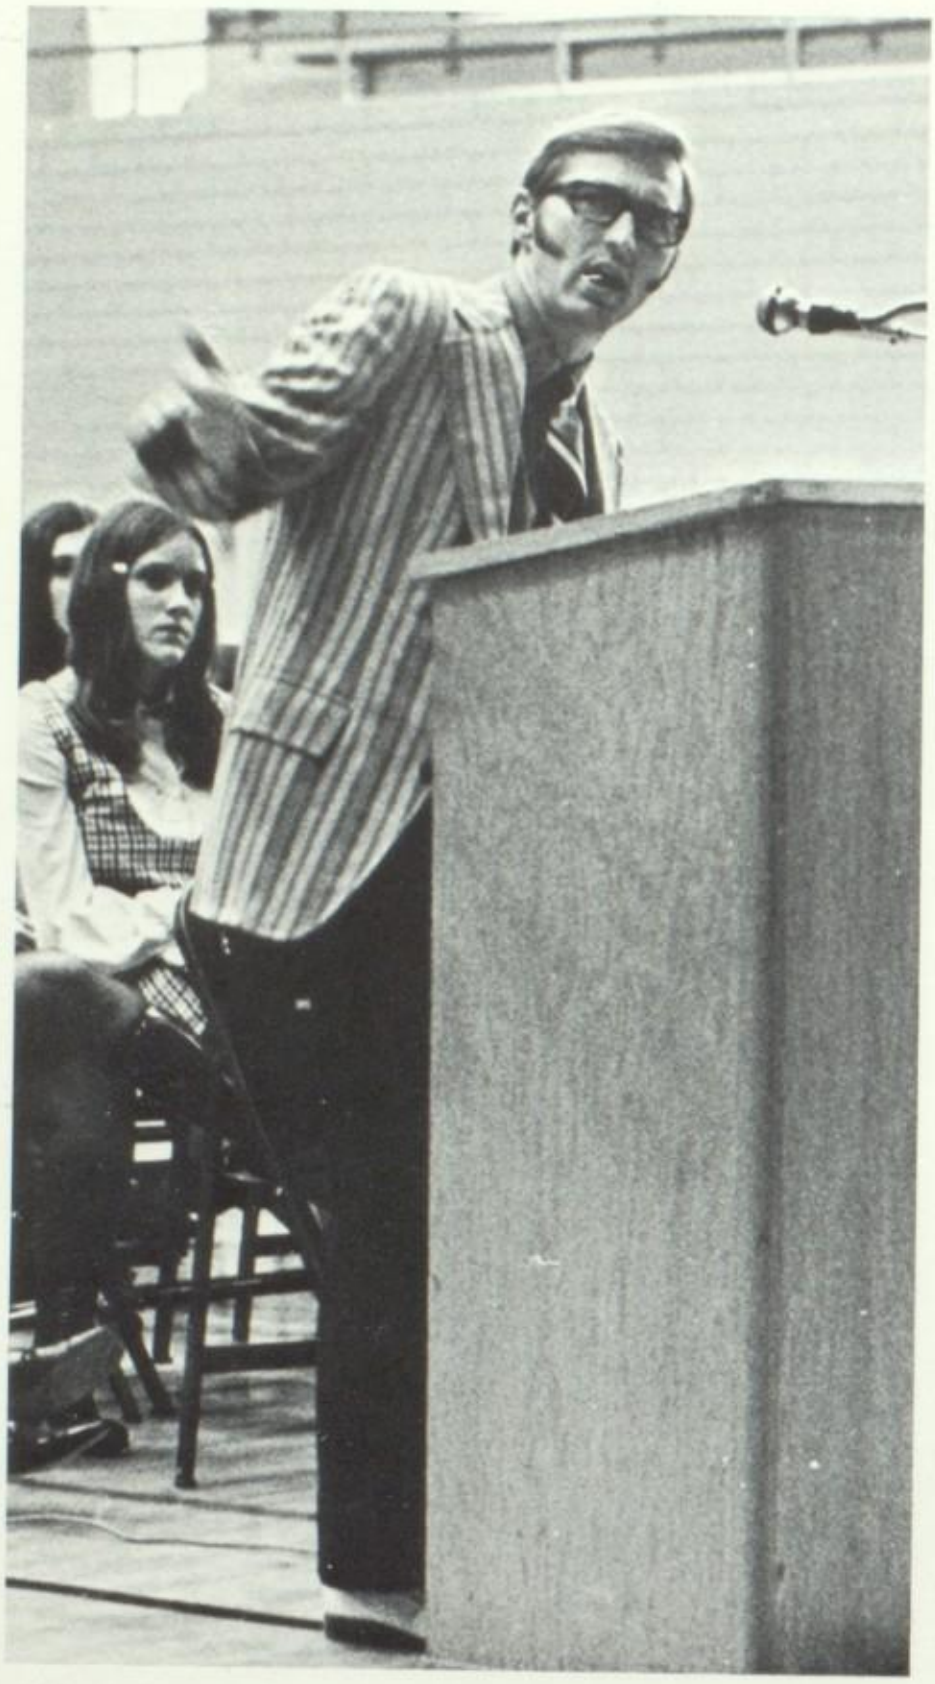
N.F.L. strives for perfected forensics

As the end of the G.B.H.S. debate season drew near, the squad began turning their thoughts to state N.F.L. debate tournament. This tournament determines whether there is a team worthy of the National Forensics League tournament. National Forensics League is an organization made specifically for debate and competitive speech. Each student is given points for every round of debate, and for his speaker points. In speech, the student is given points determined by his ranking. According to the number of points the student receives, he is given a degree of merit, honor, excellence, and distinction, the highest being a double ruby with the total of 500 points. Each degree has a stone, be it emerald, sapphire or ruby, that is set in a key charm and given to the recipient. President Tom Curzoh led the local chapter in their various activities, which included a get acquainted party, Christmas party, spring fling and the Awards Banquet.



Citizen of Tomorrow speaker, Mr. David Dalke compelled students with the topic of involvement.

As weary debators prepare to leave for their final tournament of the year they realize that the termination of a rewarding and yet tiring season is at hand.

Speakers, Kickers discipline themselves to achieve perfection

Debaters thoughts not only turn to state N.F.L., but also to the upcoming speech season. From dramatic interpretation to musical comedy the students find the subject that suits their specific talent. Duets, humorous readings, prose and poetry are also available along with oration and extemporaneous speaking. Early morning departures and late evening arrivals become a frequent part of both seasons. Personal goals are always striven for to achieve the height of the individual's talent.

In order for a speaker to communicate, he must have his audience under control. Mr. David Dalke, speaking for the Citizen of Tomorrow assembly, had students truly enthralled throughout his entire speech.

Communication, though achieved through many facets, can also come from happy faces and pretty legs. The Pantherettes seem to do an excellent job. Dating back to 1963, this years' edition included three seniors, seven juniors, and three sophomores. Entry is by audition only and the girl with the most experience is voted captain. With twelve shapely girls under her control, Captain Tecoa Sargeant advised on proper formation and discipline. The Pantherettes, performing football and basketball half times, realize with the last performance that auditions must soon begin and routines redone for the upcoming year.

National Forensics League awards amounting to 500 points or more were given to senior debaters Shauna Scranton, John Remmert, Darrell Revell, Steve Montgomery, Mark Rondeau and Mary Keenan.

Successful wrestling squad dominates the sport scene

While the basketball team was winning the last out of seven league games, the wrestling team kept their foes stymied on the mat. Under the direction of Coach Charles Gowdy, the Panther wrestlers decisioned nine straight dual opponents for an undefeated season and their first WCKL championship.

The Panthers totally bombarded Larned, 54 to 0 in the first varsity match of the season, while the closest dual was a 26 to 17 victory over Russell. Averaging 40 points a match to their oppositions meager 10, the team out-distanced all other league matmen.

A feeling of disappointment was experienced not only by the team but also by the school as the wrestlers werre able to qualify only 5 out of a planned 8 or 10 for the regional tournament. Seniors Curtis Robinson and Fred Foos advanced to the state tournament, Fred won the individual state championship at 155 pounds, another iirst for GBHS.

Unpredictable Junior Eddie Condit extends his body while attempting to gather two points against Pratt.

As the wrestling season inched closer to an undefeated year, the Panther squad prepares for this match through loosening exercises.

Intramurals develope basketball techniques as varsity takes second

Virtually all of the athletic events were in full swing by mid-January as intramural players organized themselves for 11 weeks of athletic activity. Sponsored by the Great Bend Recreation Commission, the intramural program boasted more students than any varsity sport. With its 12 teams and 90 players, a competitive atmosphere emerged that allowed students to match skills in regular Monday and Wednesday night leagues. Final standings in the 12 team league were, first to last, Smith, Krier, Carver, Dolezal, Doonan, Montgomery, Musgrove, Habiger, Price, Damn, Nobles, and Davis.

After a miserable first half season in which the varsity basketball team complied a 3-7 record, the Panthers came alive in the second half to place second in league. Culminating the race for runner-up honors was a four overtime victory at Hays, 94 to 88, which also broke a 5 game Hays jinx. Senior Willie Reed established a GBHS individual scoring record by ripping the nets for 38 points. The season was climaxed by the defeat of previously undefeated, and league champion, Garden City, 66 to 63.

Budding young journalists peddle varied publications

As the year intensified, so did sales of all types. Products ranging from newspapers to holly to popcorn gave the student lots of chances to spend his lunch money before he hit the cafeteria.

For the first time this year students were offered the chance to buy yearbooks, along with club memberships at enrollment. A new policy of a mandatory downpayment with final payments being made in January was started, leaving a broke student body with only a wait for their finished product. This new method of payment enabled the fourteen member staff to continue working on their $10,000 a year budget, as they led the pack of money-makers.

Another publication out of room 111, was PANTHER TALES, the school newspaper. People soon got used to the idea of bringing a dime every two weeks, bought subscriptions, or relied on their activity tickets for payment.

The auditorium is the scene of a frantic pileup as Kayette members wait for their greenery to ge given to them by Leesa Moore, a hardworking board member.

Assisted by Mr. Mark West, BECK members Virginia Gerritzen, Karen Spencer, and Debbie Tobias set up their display of photo cubes, auto whiz kits, and tool kits, as Miss Meister looks on with interest.

Goal in mind, band members Jim Bates, Tim Deitz, and Troy Lewis check out candy from Mr. Joe Boley.

While fellow RHOREA staff members Steve Walts and John Rathbun harrass Jan Keating, she vainly tries to collect their final payments.

As FHA officers Shelley Matthews, Nathalea Kaufman, and Mindy Peterson distribute stationary to board member Karleen Kaufman, they tell her the good points about the product, and how to make sales pitches.

Pep Club members Kathi Skolaut and Desa Nicholson turn in orders for degreaser to Pepperette Marla Rothenberger, so they can earn extra hours and money for Pep Club.

Mags, cubes, food, kits invade halls and pockets

Helping to raise the $7,000 needed to publish PANTHER TALES and raising the most money per student, were the ad salesman. In addition to getting out of school to sell ads, these six salesman learned more about business and about people in general. While the RHOREA fund is usually depleted at the end of the year, the PANTHER TALES fund kept building, in hopes fo a new darkroom, or an addition to the old one.

For the first time, office education and distributive education were combined into BECK (Business Education Clubs of Kansas). Staring the year by selling calenders, they continued by selling auto whiz kits, tool kits, and photo cubes. At all the home basketball games they were busy pleasing the crowd with hot popcorn.

While FTA had a combination rummage and bake sale to supplement their tutoring program, the annual Junior magazine sales were under way. Working toward prizes, money, and Prom, the Class of '73 sold well over $5,000 worth of assorted magazines to parents, teachers, and classmates.

FTA officers Jon Hutchinson, Karla Klepper, Sue Kluender, and Stew Brann excitedly dig through a pile of clothes contributed by club members, for their sale.

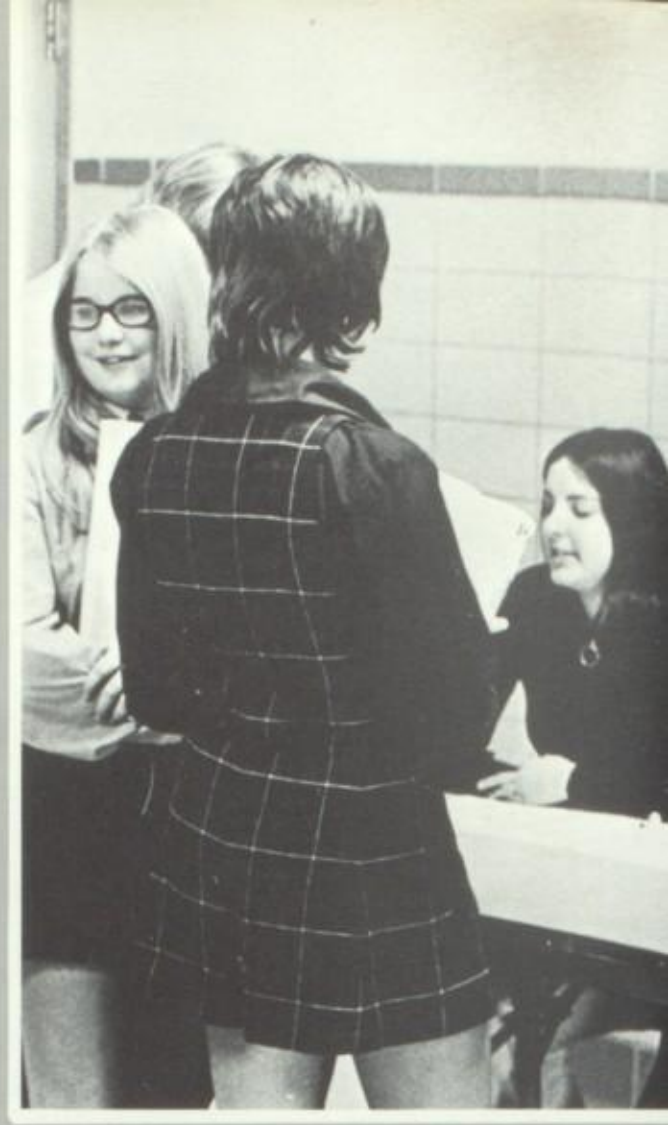
Kayette officers Bonnie Laughlin, Jeanne Karst, LuAnne Riegel, and Sherry Murphy count the donations that will help them in working toward the 2,000 point award.

Fifth hour was kept busy for student council members Bill Myers and Lynn Adams as they sold shirts through the year, making profits for the planned student lounge.

PANTHER TALES ad salesmen Janis Bell, Allan Krier, Herb Harms, John Weide, Mike Weiser, and David McKown busily ready themselves for their business ventures, in the world outside GBHS. Marty West not picutred.

Junior magazine high salesmen Lana Schaumaun ($125.00), Peggy Dumler ($116.00), Rick Beyer ($233.00), and Jane Heaton ($107.00) look over stuffed animal prizes. Robbie Boyer ($206.00) is not picutred.



PANTHER TALES staff members Peggy Clarke, Connie Frey, Dick Taylor, Toni Arnett, and Shelley Matthews relax while selling their paper.

Shirts, candy, seeds pushed again and again to meet future goals

All through the year Student Council supported several money-making projects and activities. During lunch the juke box earned its keep, as did the sunflower seed machine. Selling shirts also added income, and plans were made to sponser a Harlem Clown game and to possibly get another vending machine.

Kayette members, in anticipation for their annual Holly Ball, sold holly and different types of greenery, with the incentive of high salesman prizes. Kayettes collected more money a few weeks later, but not for themselves. Money put into test tubes carried daily, was donated to "Meals for Millions." This foundation, started in 1946, is a humanitarian attempt to help starving people through out the world. Competition was held between classes to see who could collect the most money, with the sophomores winning.

Another club planning costs of an annual dance, FHA, sold Handi-Notes, a type of stationary, while Pep Club recieved their shipment of degreaser, a Stanley Home Product, which they were selling.

With the goal of a new baby grand piano for the music department, band and chorus members sold chocolate bar after chocolate bar.

Another group of people busy at the home basketball games, besides BECK and the basketball team, were different clubs and organizations who raised money for future projects, by running the concession stand.

Eager students anticipate basketball homecoming

Lockers of basketball players, and for the first time, wrestlers, were adorned by the creative and imaginative efforts of hard-working Pep Club girls and girlfriends of the athletics during the homecoming week. Excitement and anticipation built as the sophomore and junior attendants, and the queen candidates were chosen.

During the first assembly, the candidates, attendants, and escorts were introduced for the student body's last "once over." Then the huge gym emptied, with each student going back to classes and voting on the senior girl that was their choice for Homecoming Queen.

As joyful tears flow Marie voted queen; team trounces Russell

Topping off the homecoming festivities was the crowning ceremony, in a second morning assembly, at which the queen was named by the Pep Club President before the hushed, packed bleachers. Astonished looks, tears of joy, and clapping filled the air. Then the ever reluctant flower girl and crown bearer moved slowly forward before the traditional kiss and crowning. After a short pause for pictures, everyone returned to class to ready themselves for the Russell game that night.

Old alumni and present students danced to "Hero Dog," at the dance following in the gym, the site of that night's victory over Russell. This tradition had been set by the football team with their homecoming win. At 12:00 that night the light went on, and the people scattered each their own way, marking the end of the 1972 Basketball Homecoming.

FHA sponsors Snowball while FTA seniors teach

During the month of February, FHA, Kayettes, and FTA were especially active. FHA held it's annual Snowball dance with the theme being "Cupid's Carriage." Playing for the occasion were the Young Raiders form Lawrence.

Mr. Homer Kruckenberg was crowned Kayette Sweetheart by the Kayette President. During the meeting the new king was presented with a cake, a crown, a pig, and a special skit featuring Country Western Music.

Seniors in FTA gained experience in teaching on February 23rd when they participated in the FTA student teaching program. All grades on the elementary and Jr. High level were taught along with special education and gym classes.

Track future looked bright gym, baseball, outlook tough

Sparking the hopes of the Panther track squad are the nine returning letterman who were the top point-makers for the team last season. The 1970-1971 squad placed second in league competition but found revenge at the state tournament by defeating their league opponents and snaring the runner-up honors.

The Panthers' success can be attributed to the guidance of Coach Jack Hague and his assistant, Harry Kline. With the talent readily made available to the coaches, the squad has developed into a state 4A track power. Past squad strengths were in the areas of sprints, but this year a more well-rounded squad answered the call of the first practice and enhanced the quality of the team.

A new dimension in athletics appeared at GBHS this year with the formation of a gymnastics program open to all interested students. Providing the instruction was Mr. Ed Johnson, who produced a program that kept many students interested in the art of body control and coordination. Among the events that the gymnasts competed in were side horse, uneven parallel bars, balance beam, floor exercise, rings, long horse vaulting, high bar, and parallel bars.

Two tough Panthers, Senior Mark McLeland and Junior Roger Bear, prepare for the daily track routine by stretching it out before pratice.

She Sharks alertly go through daily pratice and hard work in preparation for their annual water show.

Baseball players watch as she-sharks prepare water show

With the return of seven lettermen from the team that complied a 14-3 win-loss record, the baseball team had high expectations as the spring season rolled around. Several promising underclassmen also helped to provide for the winning attitude that is necessary for success.

Again the Panthers took the field under the direction of Coach Al Burns, who for many years has led Panther teams to success.

Thirteen years ago, She Sharks produced their first aquatic show and since then it has been an annual spring event.

Comprised of nine sophomores, eight juniors, and five seniors, the She Sharks centered the 1971-1972 theme around "Storytime with She Sharks."

Using songs from several motion pictures, the girls came up with a variety of unique movements not easily perfected. The fantasia was presented for the second year in a row at the BCCJC swimming pool, March 25 and 26.

King and Queen chosen from senior nominations

Intended as a popularity contest and a gimmick to promote yearbook sales in the '30's, Rhorea King and Queen has evolved through the years to represent the students body's selection of the seniors who have contributed the most to the school. In the past few years, elections were controlled by the juniors with popular seniors being nominated and being crowned during the Junior-Senior Prom. This year the RHO-REA staff was returned the responsiblity of the elections, with the juniors keeping the tradition of honoring the winners as Prom royalty.

FHA, FTA plan dances as FFA celebrates week

During the last months of the 1971-72 school year the various clubs at GBHS were involved in several activities. After a short rest from Snowball, FHA members began making plans for their state meeting in March, which was to be held in Topeka.

FTA board members planned and made all arrangements for a Bobbie Sock Hop to be held in the field house on February 26, but a lack of interest from members caused the even to be cancelled the day before.

FFA members celebrated National FFA Week February 20-26. They publicized their club by setting up an exhibit in the business district and also by displaying a large poster on a semi-truck parked on Main Street during that week. Winding up the week, FFA held a chili supper for the public with hopes of getting them involved in their organization.

ABOVE: JCL members make up the sales force to raise funds for their club by selling cookies after school. BELOW: Discussing the activities of the American Field Service Week are Student Council officers Steve Montgomery, Treasurer; Mark Rondeau, president; Kent Wade, vice-president; and Annie Polson, secretary.

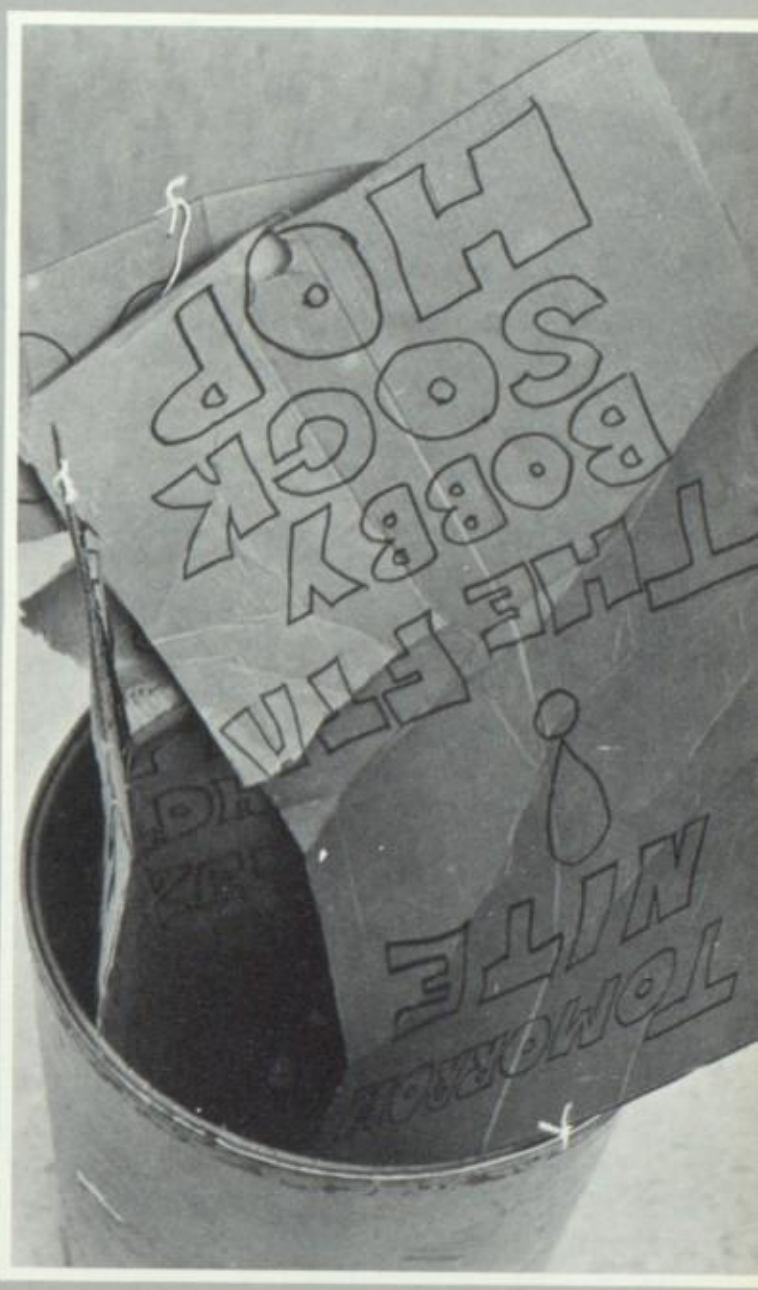
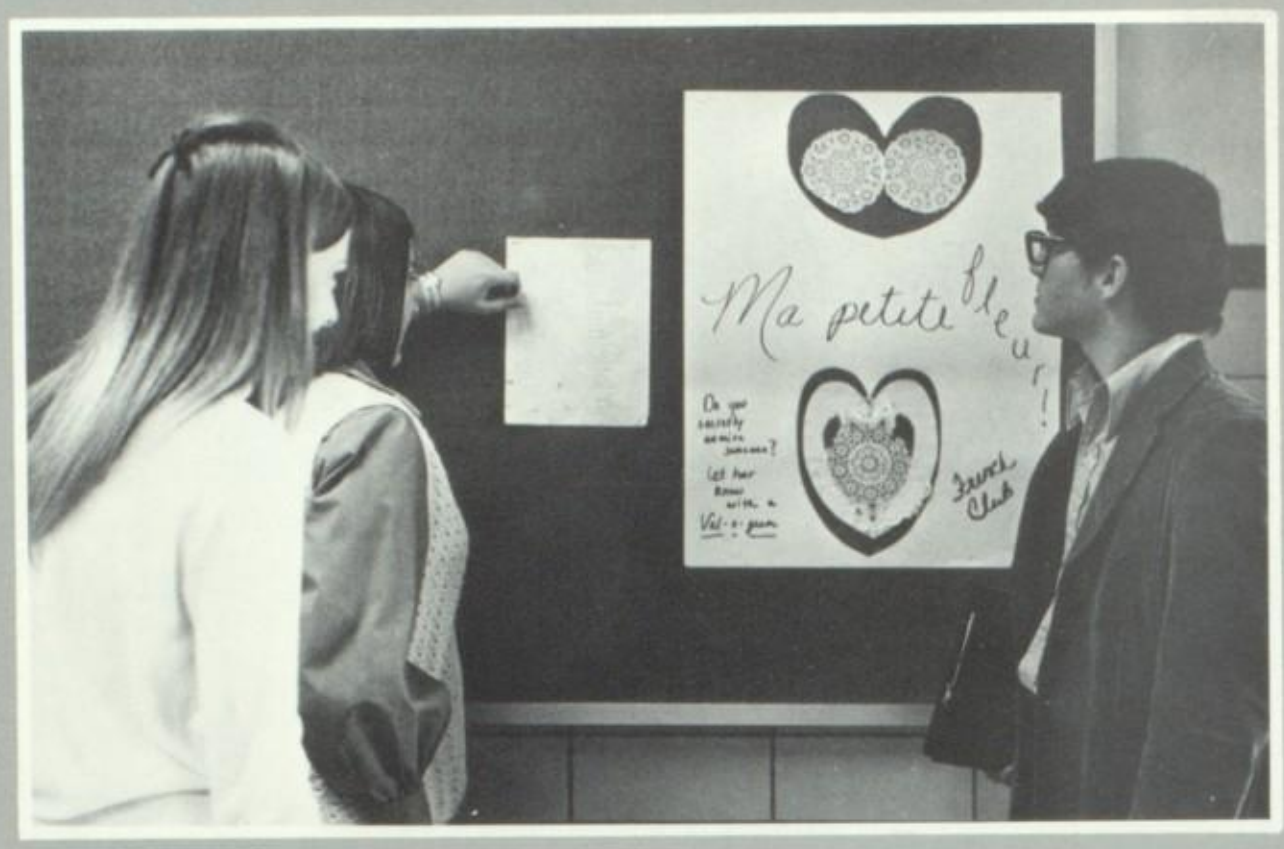
BECK officers Curtis Kuhn, Kathi Allan, Deby Peters, Dee Ann Taylor, and Rosalee Ehrlich study the year's events in their scrapbook.



Apathy struck again when the FTA Bobbie Sock Hop was cancelled due to nonparticipation among members.

Kayette board members Michele Schwartzkopf and Bonnie Laughlin serve refreshments to Principal Don Halbower during the all-faculty tea, which was hosted by Kayettes.



French Club officers Shelley Matthews, Lou Ann Erickson, and Greg Reinhardt search hopefully to see if they received a Val-O-Garm.

FFA officers Olen Munz, Sharon Partridge, Dennis Fischer, Randy Fanshier, and sponser Jerry Morgenstern greet the FFA National President at the airport before taking him to speak at a Co-op banquet.

Good Student Carla Klepper dutifully turns into a stop sign as Basketball Star John Rathbun, Cheerleader Sue Kluender, and Teacher Darlene Daubert, hesitate before talking suggestions from authority.

Active Kayette Lynn Larson busys herself by putting up a bullentin board to advertise for the upcoming Pops are Tops banquet in March.

Spanish piñata broken, the French send love as JCL sells cookies

The Kayettes held their annual election and crowning of the Kayette Sweetheart and also hosted a tea for all faculty members. They also began plans for the Pops are Tops banquet on March 20.

The language clubs were busy with social and moneymaking events. French Club sold Val-O-Grams for Valentine's Day. These were telegrams that carried Valentine messages. After attending their state meeting in Salina, JCL members sold cookies after school to raise funds for their Roman Banquet to be held later in the spring. Spanish Club members entertained themselves during this time by holding a Spanish fiesta. After enjoying a meal of Spanish food, the fiesta was highlighted by the breaking of a pinata filled with goodies.

Planning for the next year, the organizations began nominating and holding elections for the '72-73 club officers.

Musicians enter contest plan spring variety show

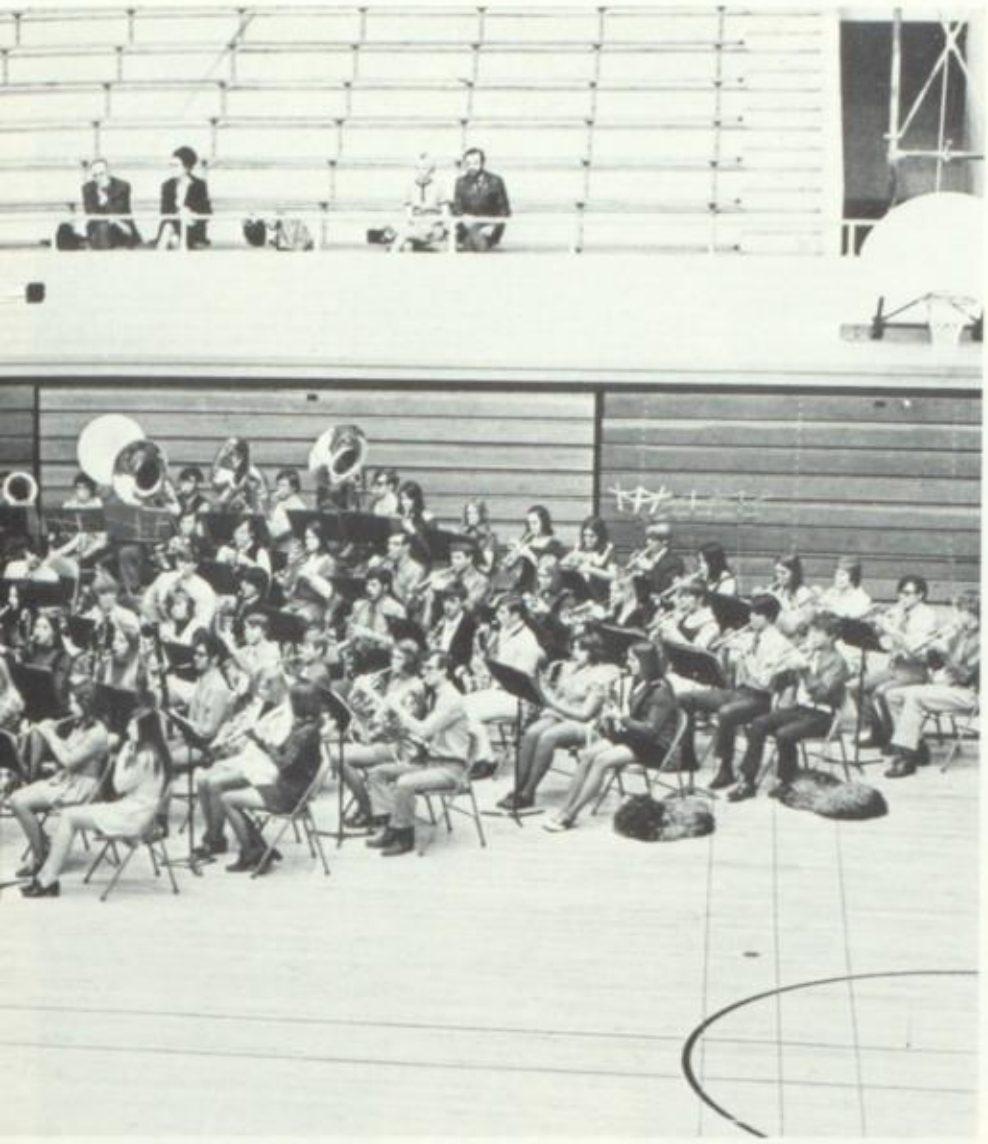
Amid early morning ensemble practices, combined with regular rehersals, the vocal and instrumental classes of Great Bend High School were deeply engrossed in preparation for state music contest at Dodge City, Kansas. Among those taking part in the contest were the A Capella Choir and Concert Band, along with various smaller groups and those students taking solos. Last year's A Capella Choir and Concert Band, together with several ensembles and soloists, achieved I ratings at state music contest, setting high standards for this year's music groups.

Talents from both the vocal and instrumental departments were combined for the second annual Variety Show. The spring Variety Show has a two-fold purpose of raising money for a new grand piano and allowing students to express their talents to the community. The music department's final performances include participation at both Baccalaureate and Commencement exercises.

Juniors Susan Wright, Cindy Love, and Susan Lorence disguise themselves as dancing potatoe-head people while they audition for the upcoming Variety Show.

Selected students from the Concert Band combined their talents in the formation of the first Great Bend High School Symphonic Band, whose members met before school to create some "symphonic sounds."

Performing for the public, the Concert Band re-created highlights from their marching season, along with selections ranging from classical to contempory.



Jazz Ensemble begins preparing numbers for the upcoming Variety Show, of which they play a vital role.

Although this was the first year for the Sophomore Mixed Choir, they participated in four concerts, including the traditional A Capella Choir Christmas concert. A Capella Choir is the goal of each member.

Final productions staged Upper 10% is recognized

"The Man Who Came To Dinner" was chosen as the final production of the Class of '72. With fresh memories of their Junior Class Play "Up the Down Staircase," many showed up for tryouts, and were ready to start learning lines immediately.

This Kaufman and Hart comedy concerns a strong-willed celebrity trapped with middle class personalities in a small Midwestern town. Under the direction of Mr. James Payne, a newcomer to the school second semester, the cast and crew members worked hard in preparation for the scheduled dates of April 10 to 11.

Earning the recognition of having the highest grades through their high school years to date, were 34 members of the Senior class. The Upper 10% were honored with a special seat at the awards assembly.

Seniors take last test, discard school cares, look toward graduation

While some Seniors chose to work on their class's last dramatic production, others were going through one of the first dramatic moments of their life. Some worried, some studied, some skipped, but they all thought of the final approaching day when they could no longer be called members of GBHS, something they had taken for granted. Plans were made for marriage, service, college, jobs, and other futures yet to be determined.

All in all, the Seniors of '72 had mixed emotions about leaving a place that had been like a prison to some, but in truth was the last and only buffer from the outside world and its problems. They also knew that a class, very much like themselves would follow, and be forgotten in the shifting masses, just like they would be.

Were they ready to be on their own, without having to abtain a sacred yellow pass? Could they be responsible for themselves when most of their lives their every action had been watched, planned, and predicted? Were they mature enough to face the world as it is today? But these questions remained unanswered as they took their final step out of childhood, the one up to the podium, to accept written proof of their twelve year education.

It seems apparent that Senior girls find little time for studying in the library conference rooms while trying to catch up on the daily happenings and the latest news.

Photographers Gary Bamber and John Remmert show they're as photogenic as the next person.

Inhabitants of the lunchroom engage in gossip, studying, and a little eating in their short lunch hour.

The Story of 72?

"I really believe that your goal this hour should be to develop and agree upon your final page — what goes in it, the picture that goes on it, and what you're going to say."

"I've been asking people what has made this year. They usually mentioned some special activity . . ."

"The only thing that made this year was this hour . . ."

" . . . a lot of unanswered questions, it's real hard, a lot of the same answers, it's kind of hard to express."

"How do you picture that?"

"Last year's seniors wanted to get out and go to college. This year the idea is to get out just to get out."

"This year I think it's going to be different because they aren't going."

"What is the attitude? Is it with the school?"

"I don't think we're that much different from last year."

"Do you realize how far behind Kansas as a state is in education? Something like 34th."

"My God!"

" . . . At least they have a direction to go in. Right now I'm so lost I don't know what I'm going to do."

"Look how many take advantage . . ."

'I haven't done a thing this year and yet I'm happy with myself for doing it."

"I'm not ready to graduate and go on; I haven't learned enough."

" . . . but there's very little difference between college and high school . . ."

"Some people have the wrong impression of what college is going to be."

" . . . you're going to learn what you think you need to learn."

"College isn't for everybody . . ."

" . . . you're going to get out of it what you put into it."

" . . . it's all in the point of view when you go . . ."

"Are you scared?"

"Yea."

" . . . it's so much of a social thing."

"I worked my tail off last year."

"This is my best year for fun."

"You can't base the last page on seniors."

"The seniors made so much fun of us it made us proud to be sophomores."

" . . . they were involved; they were interested . . ."

"There are no senior leaders this year."

" . . . I think values are changing."

" . . . spirit of the team is dictated by the spirit of the school."

" . . . should it be dedicated to us? Or should it be sophomores, juniors, and seniors?"

"We ought to wrap up the book with what the feeling of the school is."

"We can't tell what sophomores and juniors think."

"Seniors are the school."

"But what are we going to do about the last page?"

" . . . I think if you don't have faith in yourself, or if you don't care to have faith in yourself, then you're not going to have a good year."

"I like our class."

" . . . it's the best."

"No it isn't, every class claims they're the best."

"My God, how do you rate 'em — one to ten?"

"I think this is the last page; it's the attitude of the school."

" . . . it's right on for change."

"We haven't found ourselves yet . . ."

"You may be a leader but if nobody shows you how, you can't lead."

"What are we goin to do with the last page?"

"I thought we were going to do one of Karst's poems, you know, the thing we had in the intro and in the Christmas section."

"And homecoming."

"Great, who will write it?"

"How about a picture of a person with a cap and gown with a little kid . . ."

"Or a little kid sitting there putting on his brother's robe . . ."

" . . . now he's given up his toys and now he's becoming what his brother is . . ."

" . . . the litle kid represents new youth . . ."

"How will that explain question mark?"

" . . . the story of '72; the end of the story is us going out. It's not the recycling of kids . . ."

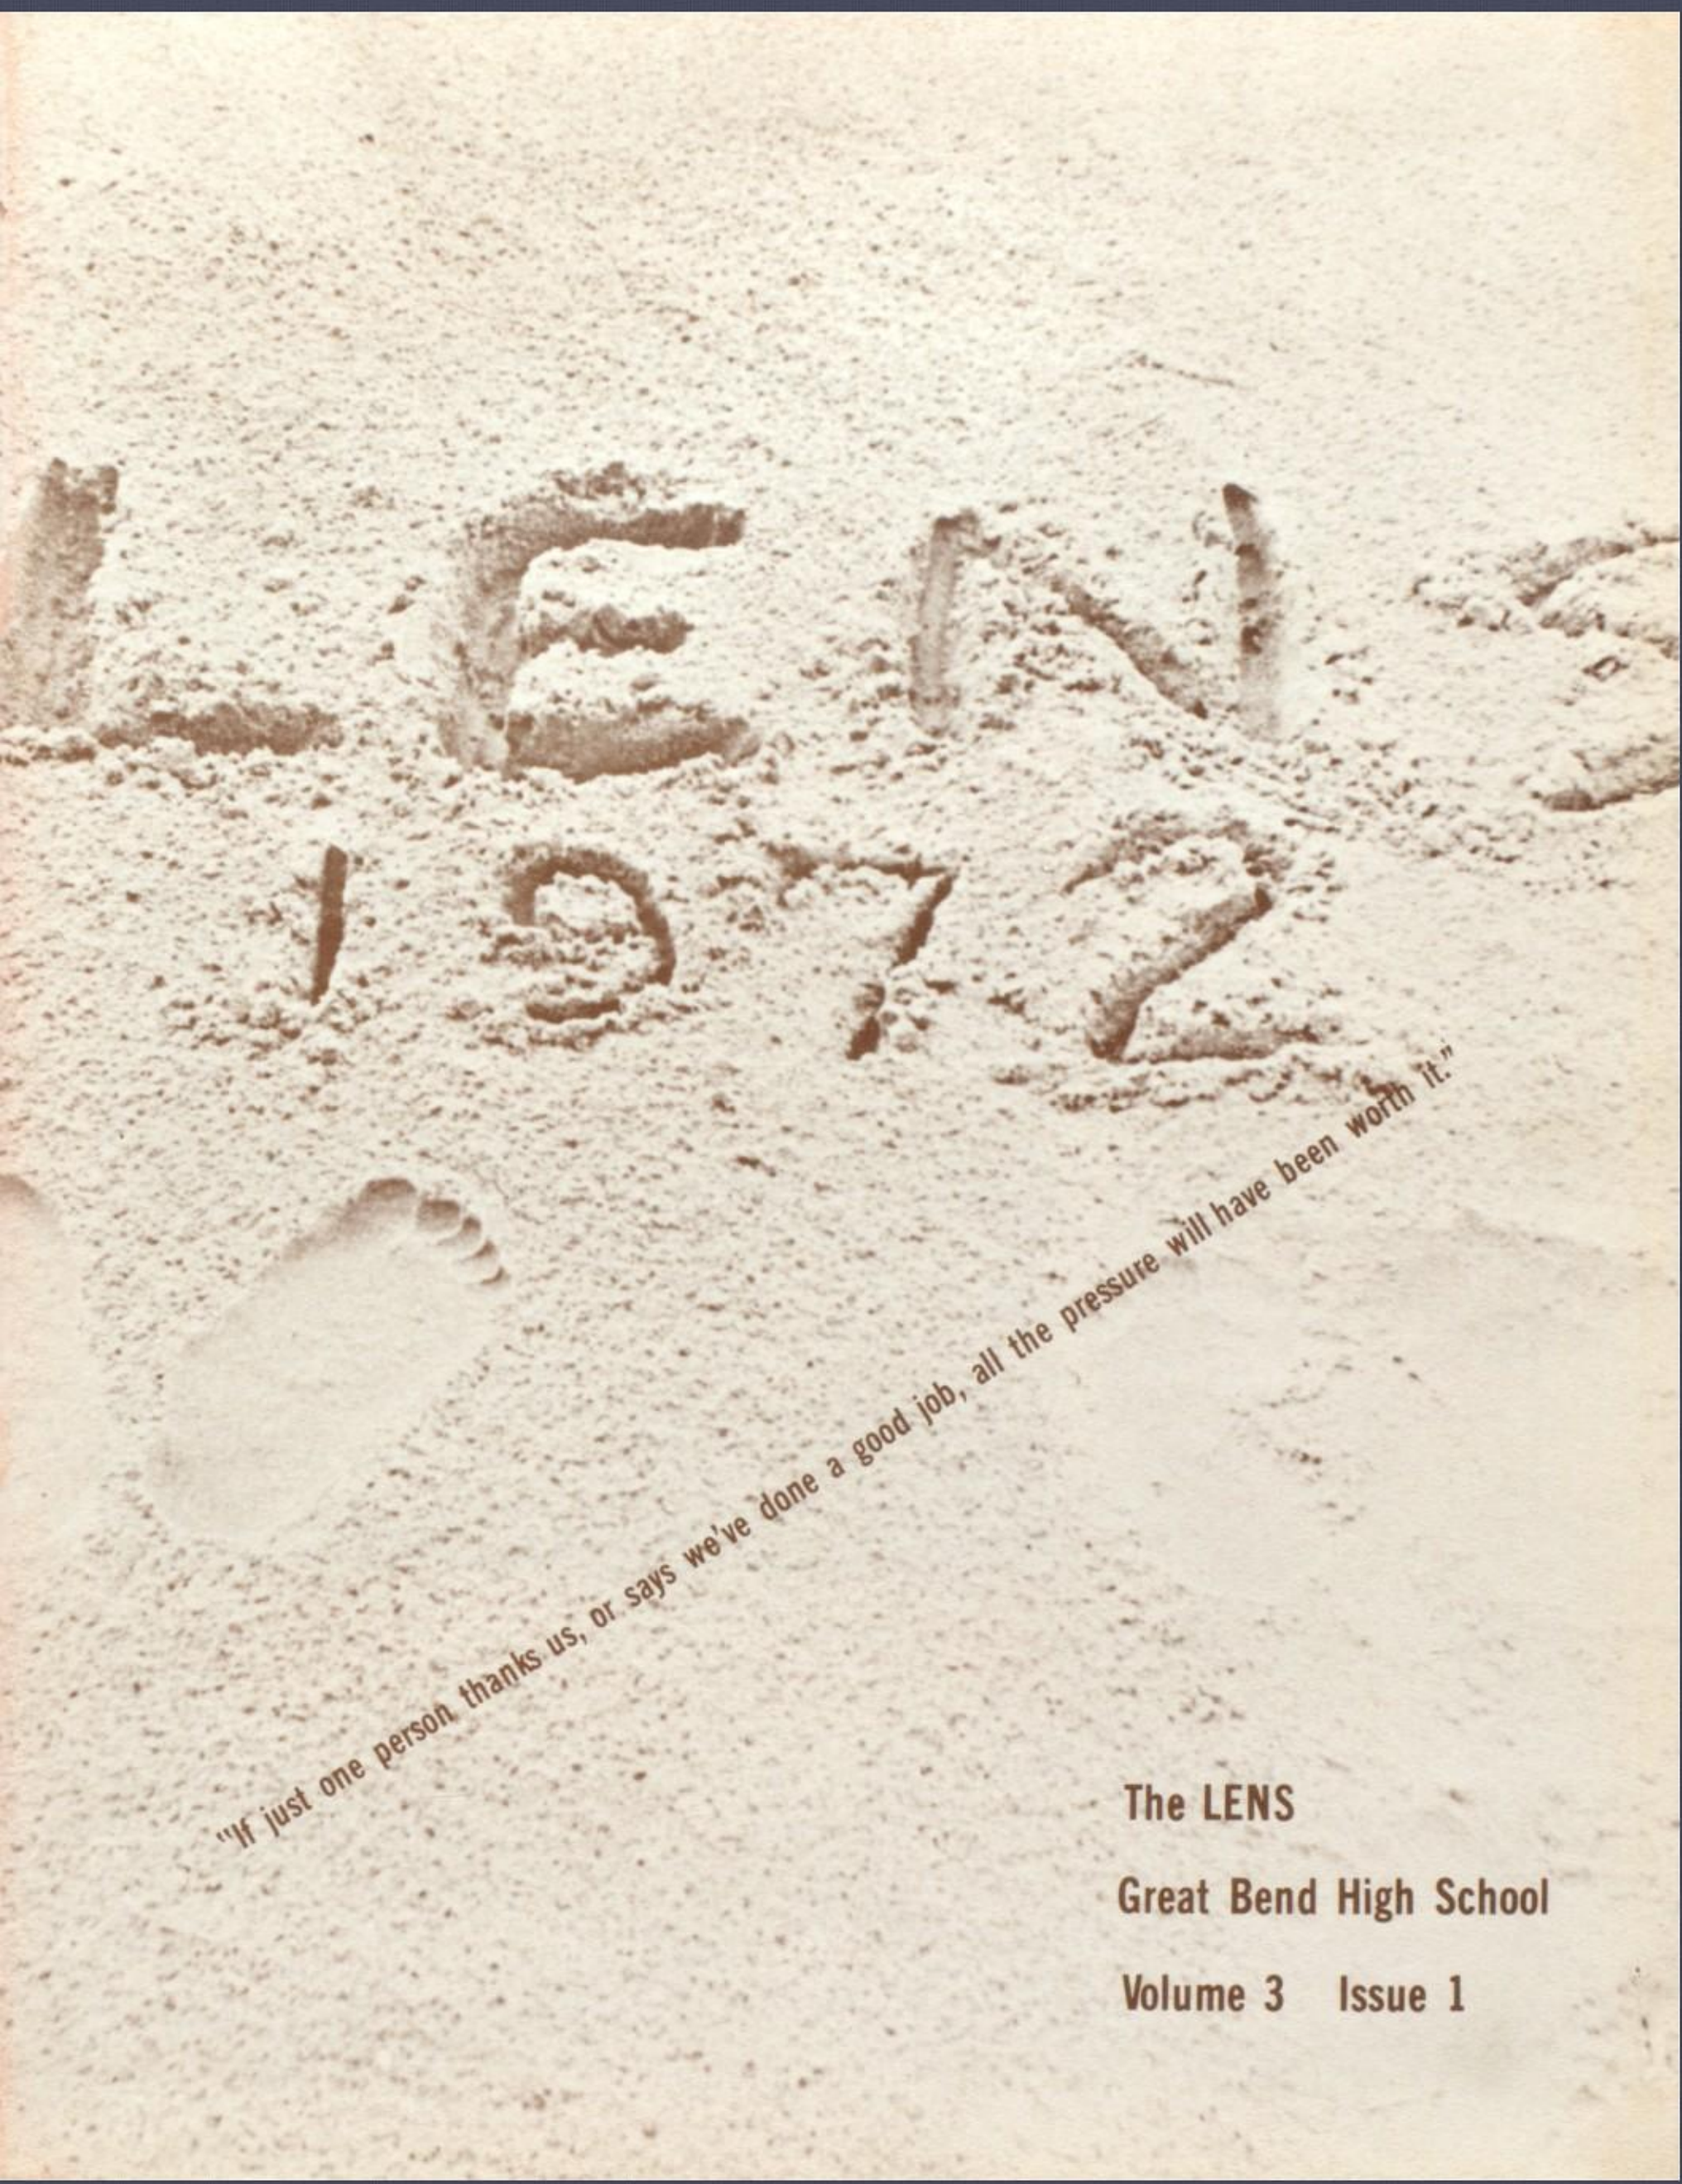
"I don't think we should put the school in it."

"We are the school."

"Hey! Let's just get a tape-recorder and do this same thing tomorrow, print it in 8 pt. type and put it on the last page."

"Let's get out of here."

" . . . they're touching people and reaching people when no one else has . . ."



The LENS

Great Bend High School

Volume 3 Issue 1

At this moment our minds, like many of yours are filled with confusion and muddled thoughts. We have written until we can write no more and really have nothing more to say. In short, we've lost much of the enthusiasm for our publications that we had earlier. But because we felt dedicated to others in our school, we felt that the LENS should be representative of every student. After hearing many comments such as "students have no say in school policy" and "I wish I could get some of my thoughts published", etc., we decided to give GBHS students a place to voice their opinion. After much thought we decided upon one general question which could be applied to all phases of high school activities. Essentially, the question chosen was "What has ———————— meant to you this year?" We chose people associated with different programs in the school to cite their opinion about their involvement or non-involvement. Although the outlet was provided, we found that many having the chance to speak out, did not reply. We did however receive statements from concerned students who offered honest opinions about specific programs. So we hope you like this combination of fact and opinion, because we think it's what you are.

When we started this magazine we spent hours in class debating how best to reveal the actual feelings of the GBHS students. How could we be fair and reach an accurate cross section? Would it be fair to cut somebody's comments out? What if these statements were personally insulting? "We cannot speak for the entire student body!" we screamed at each other. "We must!" was screamed back! Though each of us really wanted to voice our personal concern, we finally agreed to select 25 students at random and allow them the privilege to speak.

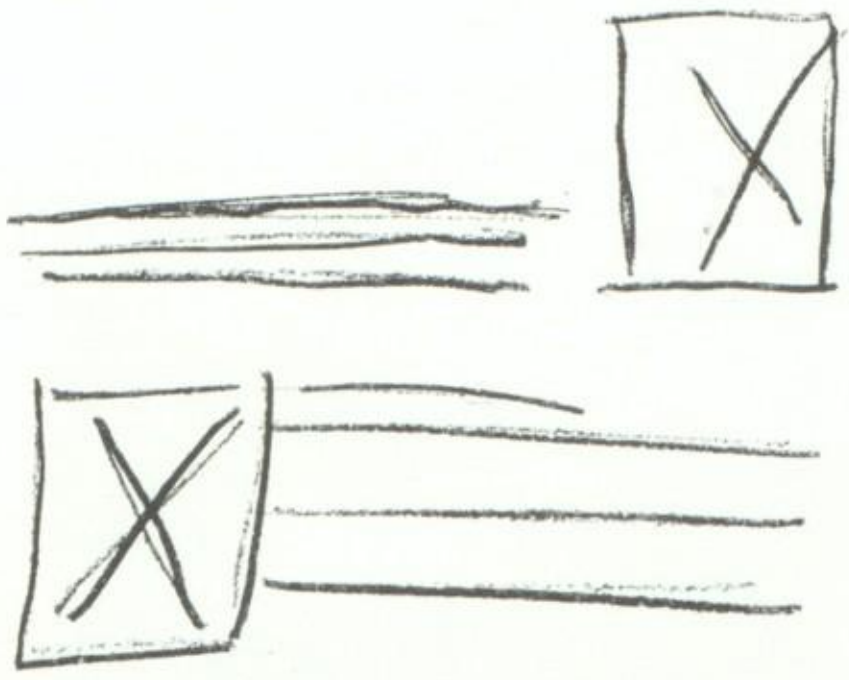
The question posed to the 25 students was: "What has student life of GBHS meant to you this year?" Each student was personally handed the question and told his response would appear in The LENS. Though we planned to pick the 20 best responses, we changed our minds and presented every one. Which leaves us with a question perhaps only our reader can answer.

Why only five?

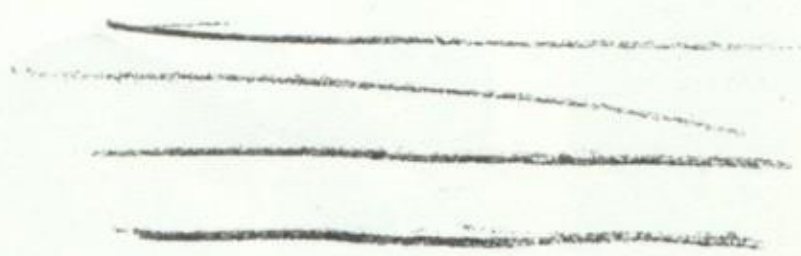
I keep thinking that once it's over I'll never be able to live it again.

—Lynn Mull

The average GBHS student life is about three weeks and one day. —Nate Fors

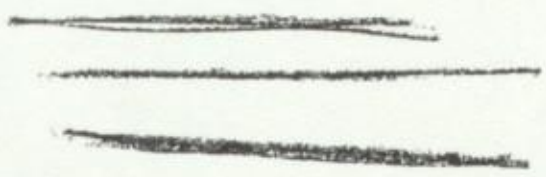


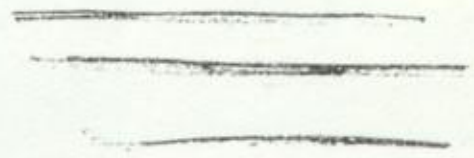
The student life at Great Bend High School has not been as rewarding as I thought it would be this year. It hasn't had any real meaning except for just getting out at the end of the year. There was never really anything much to look forward to. —Justin Ward



Student Life

It would be hard to describe student life here since most of the students aren't really living. Too many merely exist, going through meaningless daily routines, painfully biding their time until the weekends, when they can go through a different set of meaningless routines.
—Mary Keenan





Student life at GBHS is only what the students and the teacher wants it to be. If there is a teacher who is interested in teaching everything he knows, not only book wise but also as a person, he will be a success, and the students will get more out of his course. I had several enjoyable classes that were fun even though we were learning, but I also had some classes that were miserable. It is possible that the teacher was not interested in me as a person. I feel the best times were spent with my peers. I feel that there were many good times in high school, but I am now willing to let them go. —Stephanee Bates

Track season grew brighter, as individuals became strong

After finishing second in the State outdoor track meet in 1971, the Panthers of 1972 returned to the cinders with nine lettermen. Attempting to repeat the history of 1970 with another state championship, the cindermen set to work under the guidance of Coaches Jack Hague and Harry Kline to build the necessary stamina in which to gain the coveted award.

Outstanding individual performers included Seniors Willie Reed, Mark Staples, Ken Jeroue, and Junior Larry Beydler. At mid-season these four held the best 880 and mile relay times in the state 4a division.

If the Wichita State Relays were to be any indication of what was to be expected from the squad at the upcoming State outdoor May 19 and 20, the Panthers should have been in a position to reach their goal of a state championship. Panther hopes rested on Willie Reed winning the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash.

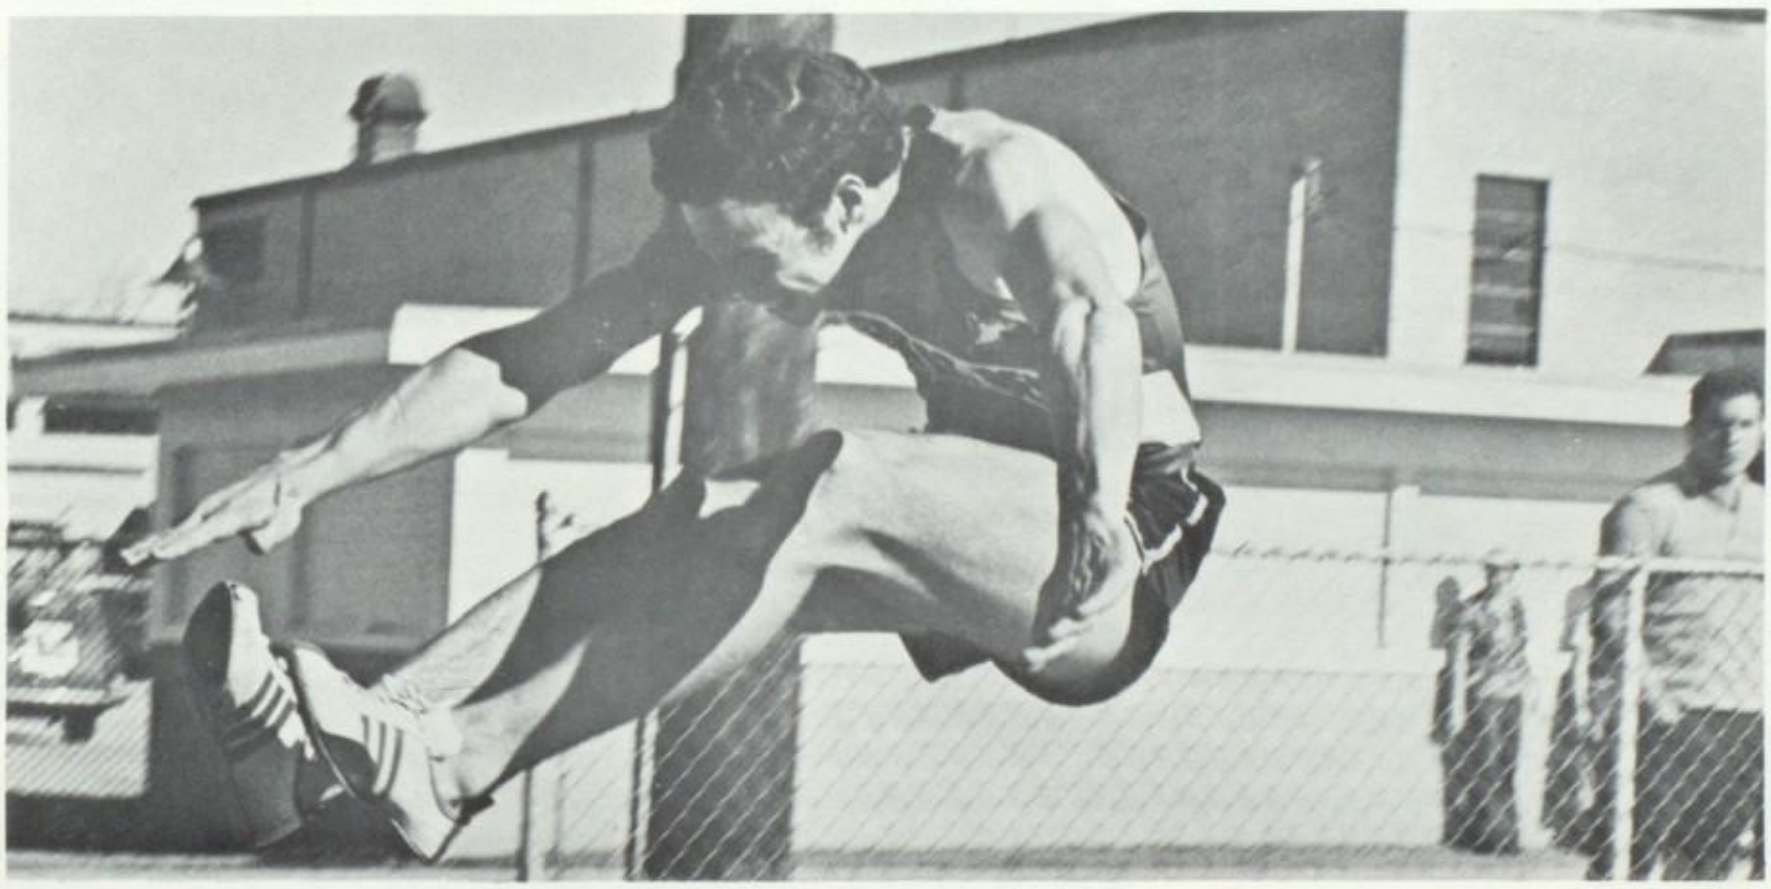
Not unusual for him, Senior Willie Reed breaks the tape

Sophomore James Emerson concentrates in hopes of shattering state records.

"It has been a great help for me to work under Mr. Hague and Mr. Kline. Because without their help I probably wouldn't have become one of the best runners in the state. In track you have to prove what you can do on your own" — Willie Reed

"Track is the hardest sport... It takes more ability to run or jump, it takes a lot of guts. I'm proud to be on the GBHS track squad because we have one of the best coaches in this state" — Ken Jeroue

"One of the most attractive facets of track is the emphasis on the individual — whether you succeed or fail at this sport depends upon you, and you alone" —Mark Staples



Baseball season questioned, while tennis record improved

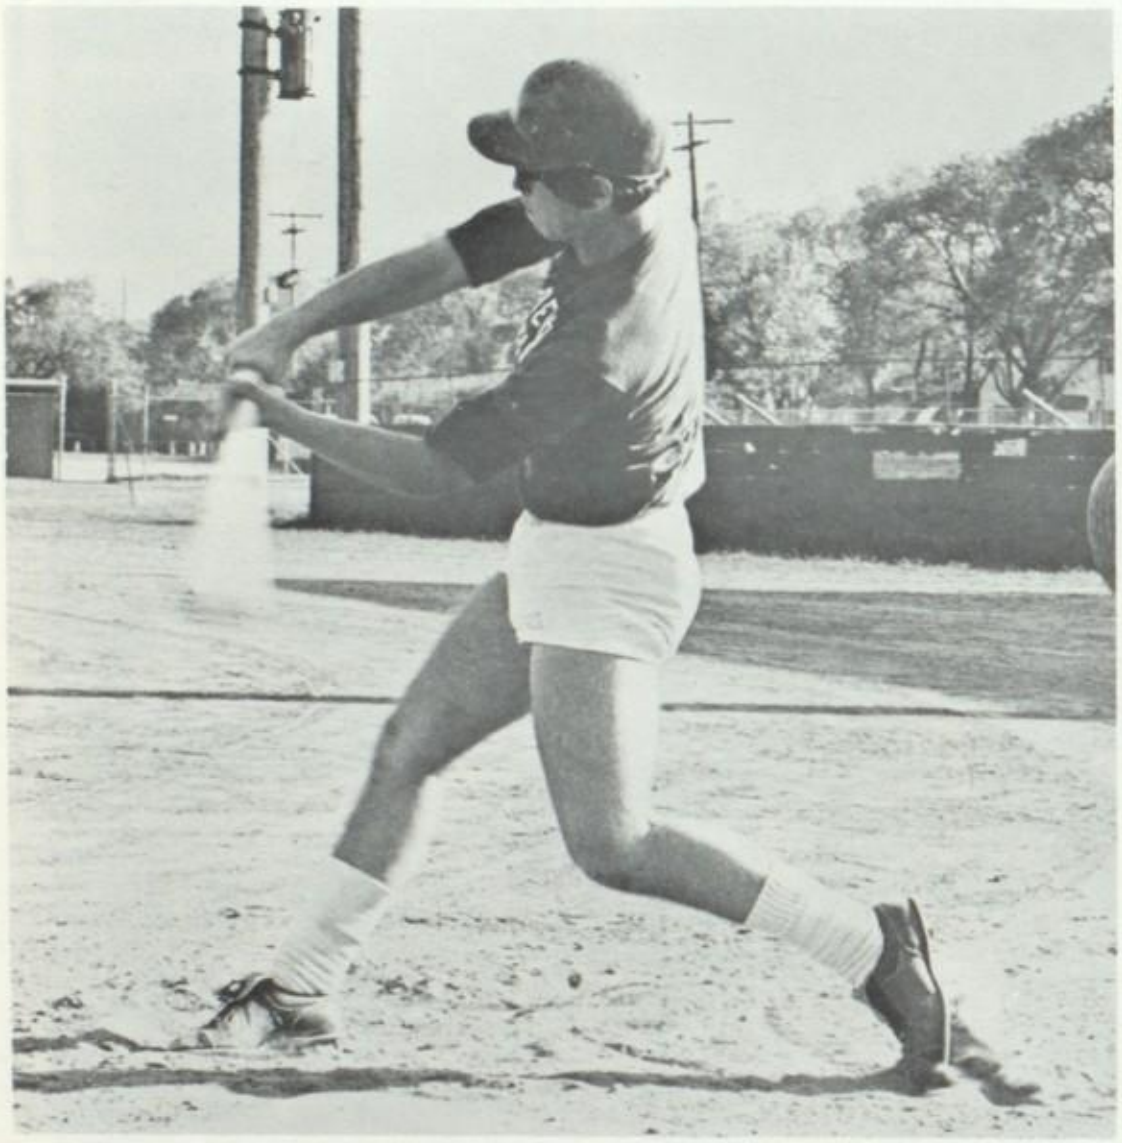
During the latter part of April the Varsity Baseball team sported a 4-6 record with 7 games left to play. The Panthers had returned seven lettermen from a team that compiled a 14-3 record in 1971, but the splitting of double headers resulted in the poor record.

Although the dismal record casted doubt on the teams chances of winning regionals and advancing into the state tournament, the team was bolstered by the pitching of Senior Ray Dolezal and the hitting of Senior Randy Smith.

After a frustrating 1970-71 tennis season which was attributed to inexperience, the Boys' Tennis team of 1972 set out to better the record that past teams had left behind.

Coach Gowdy was impressed with the tennis team's performance because it was composed mainly of underclassmen, it was competitive, and it improved as the season progressed.

Top performers at mid-season were No. 1 Singles: Robbie Sloan; No. 2 Singles: Vern Fryberger; No. 1 Doubles: Sloan and Fryberger; No. 2 Doubles: Larry White and Greg Reinhardt .



Under the umpire's controversial eye, Junior Scott Holt secures a big tag-out.

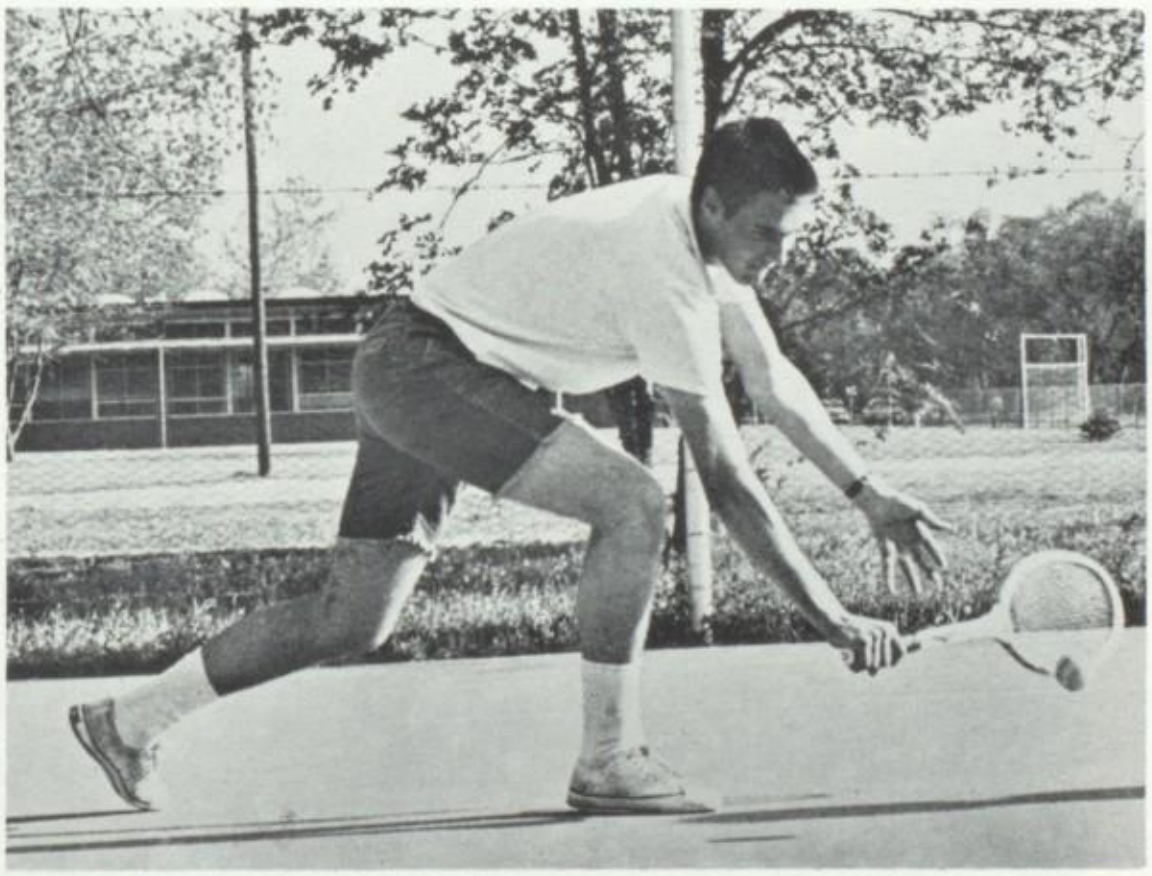
Senior Gary Nyberg, one of the top six players, extends himself in varsity action.



"I feel we had the best two coaches qualified for the job, although our record doesn't show it" — Mike Weiser

"Tennis for the last 3 years has meant an opportunity to take part in an extra curricular activity which I otherwise would have never pursued" — John Remmert

"My personal feeling is that as a sophomore it has given me good experience playing at the varsity level" — Monty Hobbs

Boys golf gained experience as girls' initiated first year

For the first time in many seasons the GBHS golf squad was dominated by underclassmen. Coach Jim Nebergall again directed the attack on the greens, as the squad strove to meet standards set by last year's graduating seniors.

The squad competed in five out of a scheduled eight matches by the middle of the season with the four-man team taking 5th at Salina and the six-man team snaring third at Lyons.

The two-man team of Robert Bayless and Steve Price, both sophomores, garnered two firsts and one second to set the pace in the early part of the season.

History again left its mark in the annals of GBHS sports history with the formation of the first all Girls' Golf team. Mrs. Herbert Smith of Great Bend culminated the interest that had lingered for several years by recommending to the school board that a team be established.

The board then turned the recommendation over to Principal Don Halbower, Vice-Principal Cecil Dryer and Athletic Director Harry Kline to study the practicality of the situation. Their study revealed that there were enough girl teams in this region for competition and the much dreamed about Girls' Golf team became a reality.

The four-man team was made up of Pennie Garrett, Pam Gotsche, Robin Grimm and Marla Mingenback. The highly competitive two-man team was composed of Jane Replogle, Carol Gordon and Cheryl Miller.

With a perfect putt, sophomore Marla Mingenback waits for the ball to drop.

Journalism, Speech Students Compete throughout the state

As the year drew to an end, speech and journalism strived to make one last splash before leaving GBHS. Throughout the speech season the squad competed in 19 invitational tournaments, taking first in ten. Students taking part in the state tournament received first place medals in every division entered with the exception of two informative speeches.

While speech students busied themselves closing out the speech season, journalism students entered the Kansas Scholastic Press Association state competition. Advancing from their respective regional contests 38 schools competed in the first state-wide competition of its kind. Four Great Bend students ranked third out of approximately 40 top students in each division. Divisions placed in were Advertising, Copy Writing, Mood Layout, and Feature Writing.

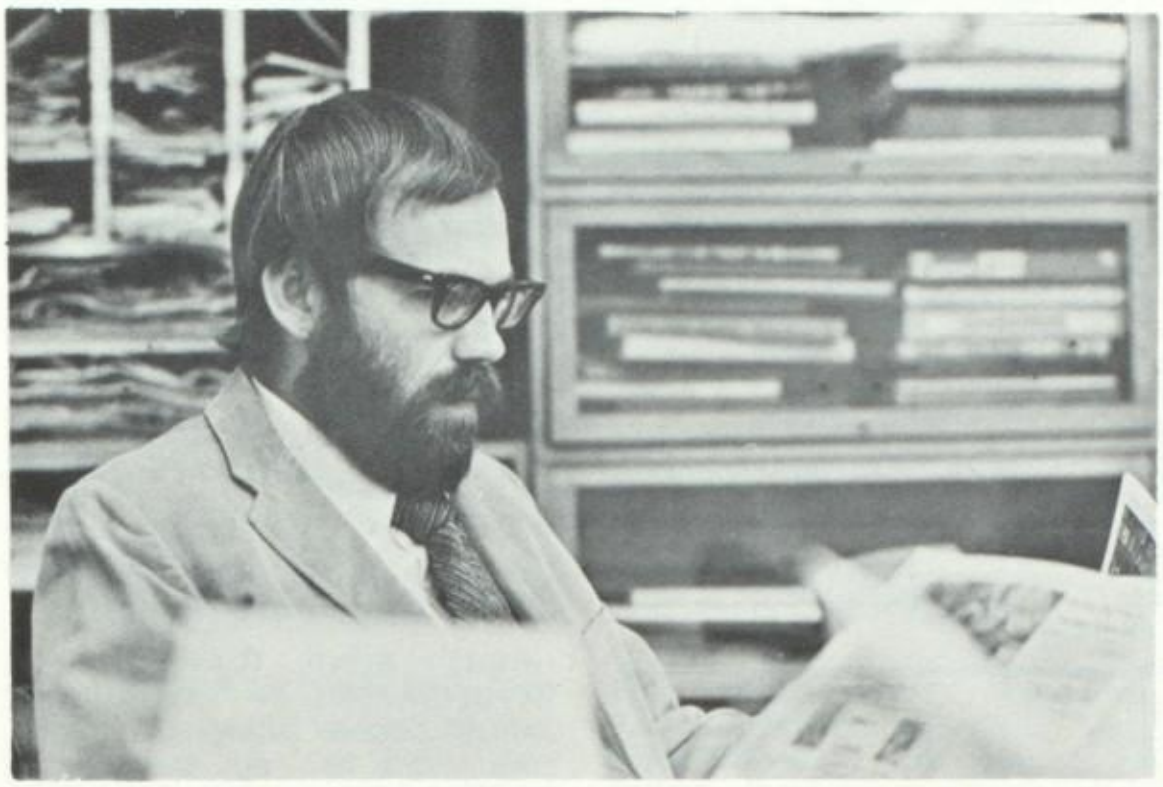
Although May 19 brings relaxation to the majority of the school, it is the busiest time for the journalism staff. As the yearbook and Lens are being distributed, the last issue of Panther Tales is being sold, watched by sophomores who recently completed the third edition of their own newspaper, the Mouse's Roar.

"Charly" as brought to life by Senior John Rathbun proved to be a sure win throughout the speech season.

"Debate and speech this year have given me the opportunity to meet and fulfill certain goals. During my sophomore and junior year, I was able to set certain ideals in debate and speech that could possibly be accomplished during my senior year. This year was spent working and striving to meet these goals. Even though my success in this area was limited, setting and meeting goals is an important ideal that should be sought in a mature, adult society." — Shauna Scranton

"Debate and speech have provided an atmosphere where people must communicate and relate to others; and ultimately survive in a world most like one in which we live." — Jeanne Karst

National Forensics representatives Mark Rondeau and Steph Turner laughingly reflect upon the national tournament in June in North Carolina.



Behind the cluttered desk of the publications department is Advisor John Mohn, now sprouting more hair on his chin than on his head.

"Panther Tales has meant a LOT of headaches, nights up 'til two o'clock, arguments, disappointments, but yet a lot more satisfactions in the end And it's taught me how to communicate better with people.
—Stewart Brann

The responsibility of representing 1,100 people has hung over the head of every staff member, and worried them all. It seems that in this school, no one wants to work or risk anything, but when they don't like what you've done, they're the first to criticize. If just one person thanks us, or says we've done a good job, all the pressure will have been worth it." —
Annie Polson

Seniors Dave McKown, Annie Polson, Steph Bates, and Stewart Brann take time to clown as they enjoy the pleasure of winning. They each placed third in their respective categories, competing against 38 other schools.

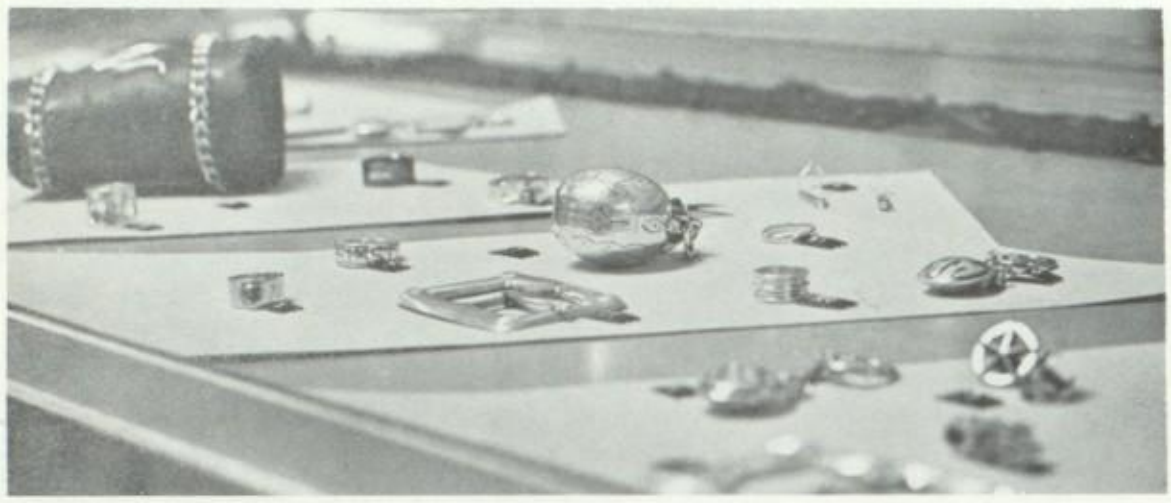
Fine Arts Department display varied talents in many fields

After the inexperienced juniors got their feet wet producing, "Hang up at Generation Gap," the experienced seniors performed, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," produced by Mr. Jim Payne. Ticket takers claimed the auditorium the second night was the fullest that it had been in fourteen years. Highlighting the last night performance was the final singing of "Everything's Coming up Roses," and the yelling of that last, "break a leg."

The Art Department began planning for the art show — held for the first time at the junior college. Many talents were exhibited as Instructor Jon Hartman displayed everything from jewelry to silk screens.



An array of design and beauty are displayed in a glass case as this jewelry is exhibited as one of the many projects chosen for the Spring Art Show.

Another form of art that can be seen is the unusual wood sculpture pieces.

With no props and the set unfinished Mark Rondeau, Stewart Brann, Jan Keating, Mary Keenan, and Terry Wilkerson find it hard to stay in character during one of the early nightly dress rehersals in the auditorium.

"The biggest compliment I can give the art program after spending three years in it would be to say that I would go through it again. The art show was some - thing the whole school could take pride in. . ." —Brett Hall.

"The talent displayed in the Senior Class Play by both the cast and the new director, Mr. Jim Payne, was indicative of what the Senior Class is capable of when they become motivated." — John Rathbun.

Bert Jefferson (John Martin) has just told Maggie Cutler (Jan Keating) that "under the influence of God knows what," he just bought her a present.

Changes in voting methods bring realism to GBHS

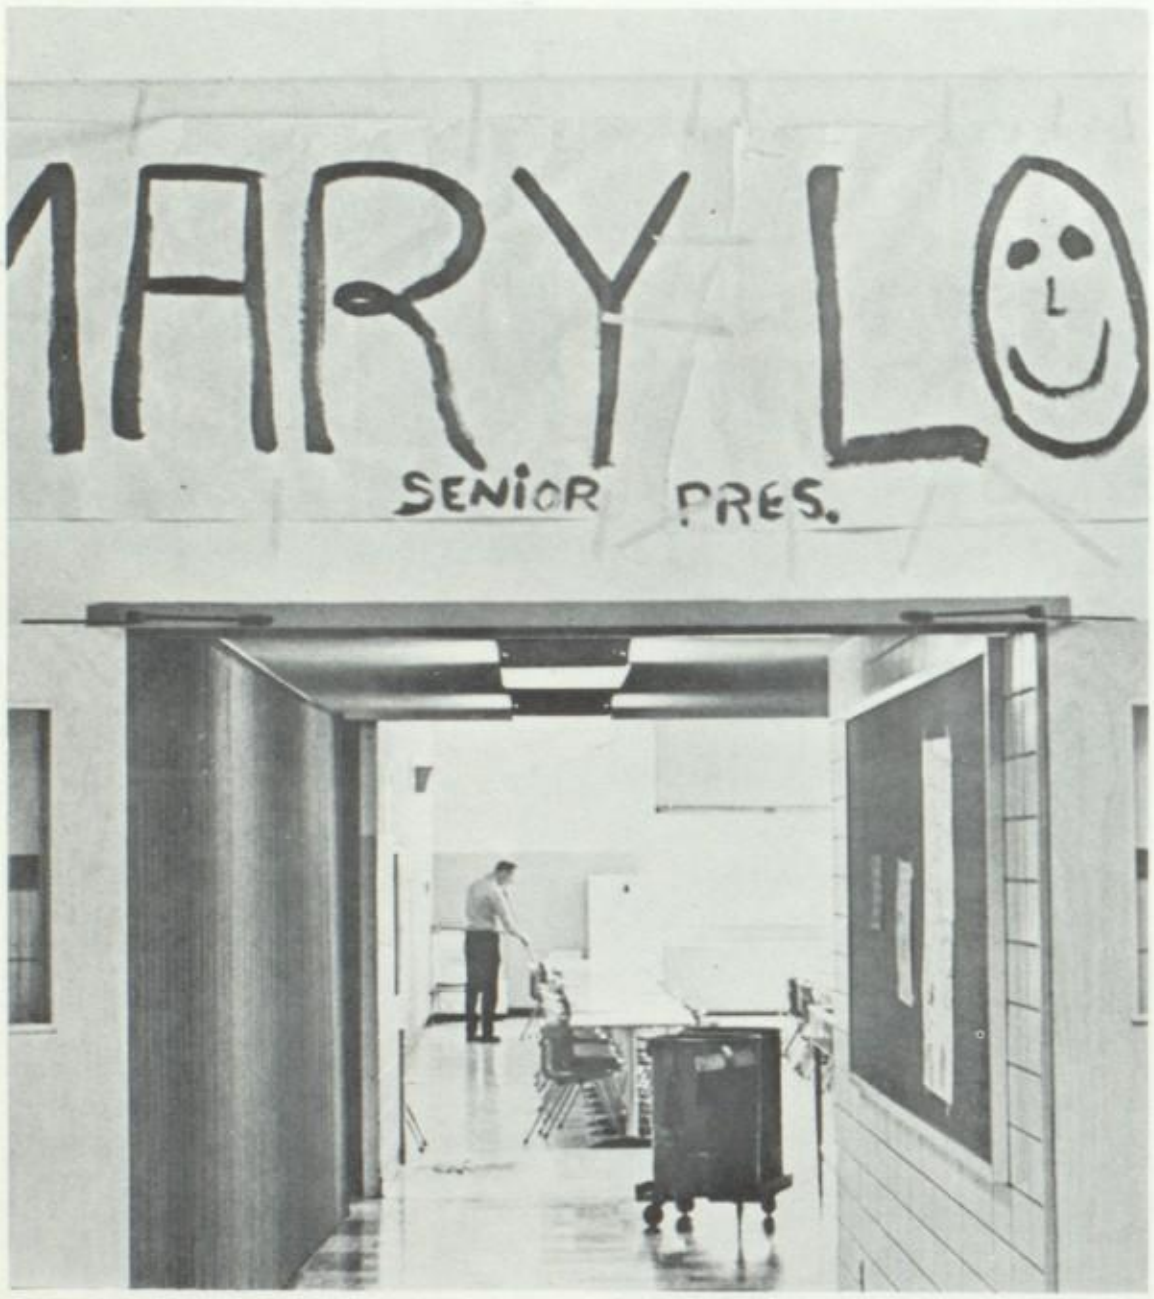
Replacing the usual procedure of being nominated for offices by classmates, students put themselves up by paying a quarter and securing a certain number of signatures for their petition.

All candidates were introduced to what seemed a huge sea of faces, the student body. Nervous stomachs and second thoughts prevailed while the Stuco candidates gave their pleads, promises, and predictions for the upcoming year.

Primary elections came and passed and with them many hurt feelings, self - evaluations, and vows to "run again next year." At last, the final election was held, with both the winners and the losers emerging to the tedious task of taking down their posters that they spent so much time making.

While these elections were being held, so were the choosing of next year's leaders for the extracurricular clubs of the school. The balloting of these and of the cheerleaders determined not only the leaders, but the future accomplishments of the school.

Stuco candidate Nate Fors discusses with the students what "keeps him running" and his status as a midget.



A few desolate posters are all that remain as evidence of the election activities only a few days before, as the school settles back into its usual routine.

In an attempt to make elections more realistic and meaningful this year, Stuco made history by using authentic voting booths and special class ballots.

"I only hope that the student body has wisely chosen all their leaders — they can make or break the year." — Jill Hewitt

"Elections was one of the most exciting things that happened to me this year. Every bit of work, fun and excitement gave me more reason to love it." — Debbie Bender

"The elections proved to be a time of wondering whether leadership is a possibility in our leaders and whether it's possible to change the system so that it has some purpose other than tradition." — Darlene Daubert

Prom activities include dining, dancing, parties and late hours

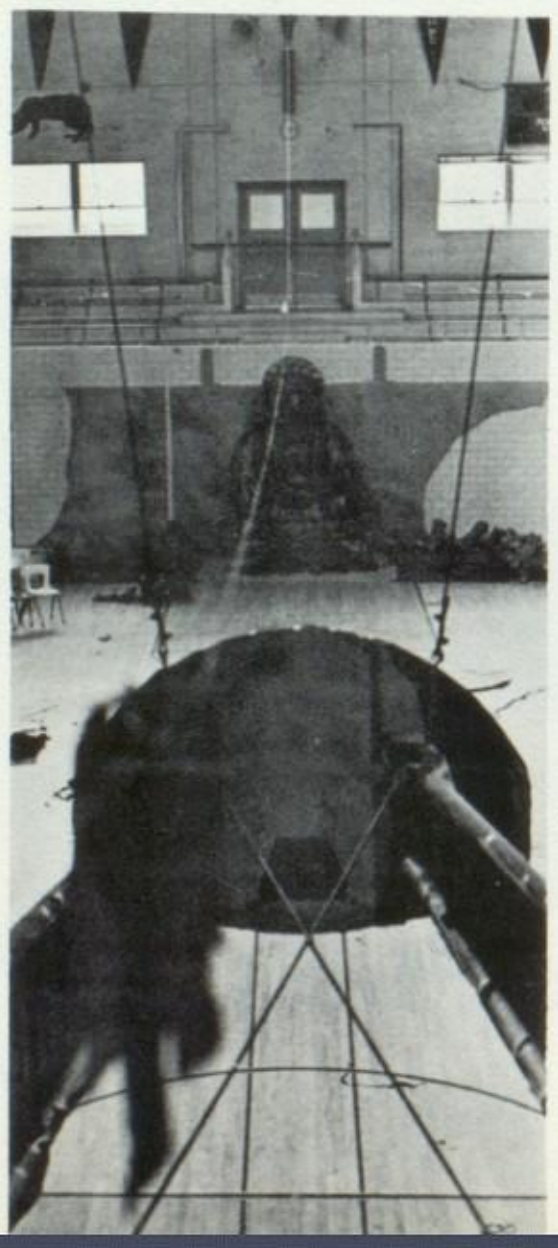
The theme this year for Prom, "Paradise of Peace," was highlighted by a bronze Buddha and a jungle with a flowing fountain with music provided by the Board of Regents from Wichita. Prom colors were moss green, dark blue, and metallic gold. This year the junior class decided to exclude the special entertainment and just reintroduce the Rhorea King and Queen and their attendants.

For many GBHS students Prom has traditionally been the last formal fling of the school year; a new dress for girls, renting a one-night tux for guys, going out for a steak dinner, and a wild night of partying until the wee hours of the morning.

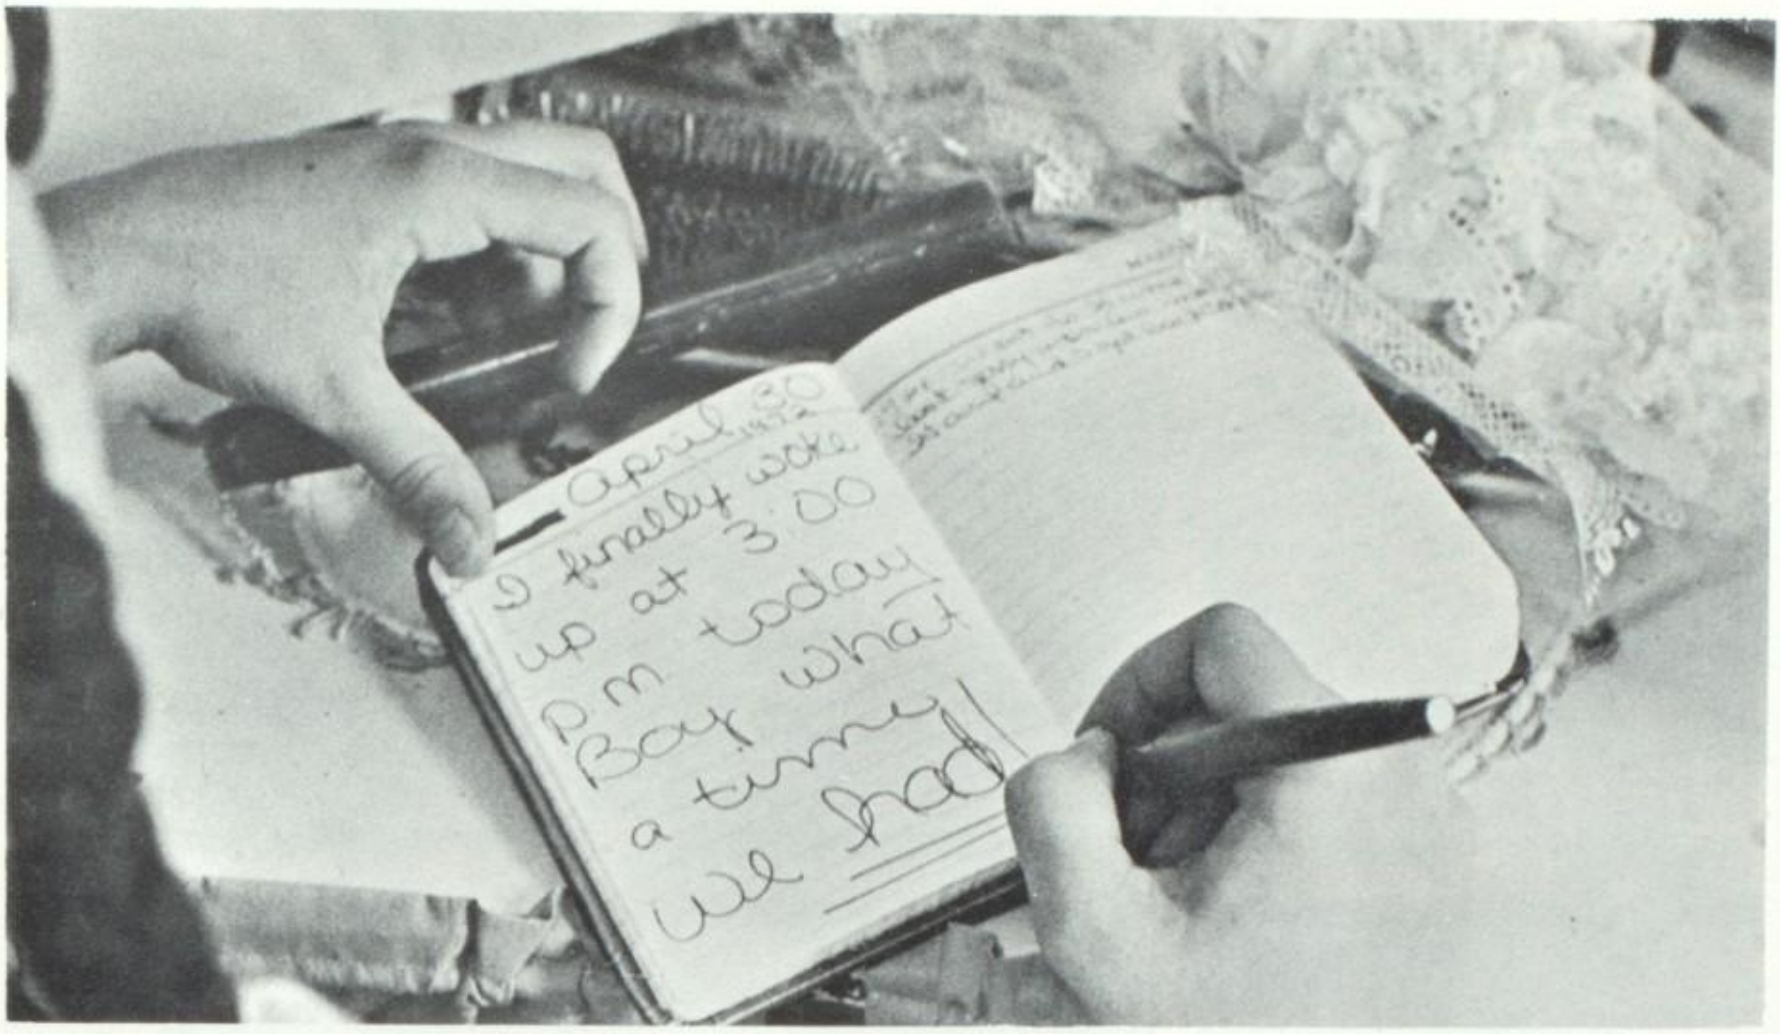
In many past years the juniors had charge of Rhorea King and Queen nominations, but this year things changed. The year book staff took over all responsibility for nominations and voting. For the first time in the history of Great Bend High School sophomores were allowed to vote. The King and Queen were announced in all-school assembly on April 20, a week before prom so that sophomores could also see the results of their balloting.

Jr. sponsor, Mr. Jim Livingston, picks up the left over pieces from last night's Prom.

"The party's over," is the feeling one gets as he takes an over all view of Prom.



Jane Heaton, Kathy Doherty, Deb Coddington, and Mary Law review the discussion about decorations for Prom, which to them, will be the greatest.



During a time out from decorating for Prom, Scott Holt, Lynn Adams, Nate Fors, and Steve Dobbs clown around and take turns at being "a Buddha."

"When you're going with someone you like to be with, to do something you like to do, how can you lose?" — Tom Curzon.

"In a word I would say a hassle. My folks say, "You aren't going to Prom with hair like that, are you?" My date doesn't like what I am wearing. I don't like the car I am driving. So, with mixed emotions, I say again, it's a hassle." — Brad Woody

Traditional Activities ended; Graduates ready for vacation

Corrigan has been a long standing tradition at G.B.H.S. This year, however, the annual Corrigan dance was cancelled for the first time since its inception because only 57 girls bought tickets to the function. The main activity scheduled for the end of the week was the dance. This was to celebrate the final effort of the liberated woman to show her skill at taking out a boy of her choice and playing the male part. Subject of another veto was the Senior Class picnic.

From May 21-26 the seniors will have their hard earned vacation before walking up the steps to receive their twelve year diploma.

No food, no fun, all because the senior picnic was cancelled for this year.

Paula McAllaster found Corrigan Week not all to easy helping Kirk Hutton.

Corrigan Week was held from May 1-5. Because Monday was the day for an ice cream cone, Linda Kern took Gary Brock to Peter Pan for his afternoon treat.

Senior boys can't hold back their enthusiasm as they clown around awaiting that "Big Day" when new and old ideas are combined into one for the future.

"The Day the Music Died," could have been the theme for the dance which was cancelled because of the lack of interest from Pep Club members. . . . .

"Since this is my last year, I've looked forward to Senior Week and the upcoming graduation. But as the week comes to the end, I'm wondering if I'm really ready to graduate and enter a different type of world." — Darrell Revell

"I look forward to it. (Corrigan) It's the one time a year I can go out and not spend my money. The girl pays for everything." — Terry Wilkerson

"After being here for three years it will be nice to have a week off to do what ever I please and not to worry about a history report or daily assignment." — Jan Keating

"Corrigan this year seems like a mess. There is so much apathy among the Pep Club that there was a lot of doubt as to whether or not to have it." — Debbie Keller

WALKING

Walking down the aisles of time
So carefully, so carefully,
I step into holes of misery
Crawl out and again proceed,
So carefully.
Through a hall of happiness,
To meet a wallk of darkness-
As I walk down the aisles of time,
I know that in my mind,
The path is not long enough to find—
Myself

Sometimes I think we're children playing hide-and-seek;
You hide,
I seek.
Before the game begins
I can see you,
  touch you,
and you laugh because I'm "it."
Then I close my eyes, count to ten,
-------only to find you gone.
—Sherry Herl

IT TAKES TWO?

It takes two to converse—
One to speak, one to hear
It takes two to love —
One to reach out, one to hold dear—
It takes two to understand—
One to listen, one to explain-
It takes two to bring peace —
One to surrender, one to sustain-
It takes two to suffer—
One to bring pain, one to cry-
But it only takes one to be alone,
Only one to die.

SATURDAYS

What has happened to
Saturday morning.
It was the only morning that I ever felt like getting out of bed.
Strange as it may seem now,
I couldn't keep my eyes closed
After 7 o'clock.

And whatever became of Huckleberry Hound,
Quickdraw McGraw, Top Cat,
And Captain Kangaroo;
Who lived in the Treasure House with Mr. Greenjeans,
And was surrounded by Bunny Rabbit and Mr. Moose and Grandfather Clock and the Magic Drawing Board and Dancing Bear.

Whatever happened to Kellog's Sugar Smaks,
And early morning dew;
Warm sunshine,
And gathering kids for neighborhood wars;
Running across lawns,
And playing "Big Army"
Where dying simply meant falling down and counting to fifty,
And where pistols fired as fast as machine guns.

What happened to the Man in the Moon,
And being afraid of the dark;
Kool-aid stands,
And carnivals in the garage;
Gathering hailstones,
And collecting old comic books;
Shivering at Frankenstein movies,
And making mud-pies on cool cement porches;
And Mighty Mouse,
Who was always there just in time to save the day.

But Mighty Mouse won't be around anymore.
And neither will King Kong,
And treehouses,
Rocking-horses and firecrackers,
And Saturday matinees at the Crest.
They are with Roy Rogers,
And Lassie;
Tom Terrific
And Deputy Dawg,
And countless others that thrilled me
On countless Saturdays that now seem so remote.
They're all waiting with the Captain
In the Treasure House.
Waiting patiently to be rediscovered
By another youngster
On another block,
Who will love them just as I did,
And then grow up and pass them by—
Just as I did.

1972 was the year that...

..Since the present year is a centennial one, plans are being made for a time capsule to be opened on Great Bend's 200th centennial. This publication, along with a 1972 Rhorea and selected copies of the 1972 Panther Tales were intended for insertion into this capsule. Therefore this article was written with the objective of being read through the eyes of Great Bend citizens in the year 2072. For this reason, we wanted to develop a history of the school and the students. We felt 1972 was a unique year, because it was our year. However, unlike most records of history with dates, and incidents, the Lens will attempt to generalize about the problems of the graduating class of 1972.

Over thirty students, three faculty members, one psychologist, and three past GBHS graduates from the years 1912, 1932, and 1952 were interviewed in depth in order to obtain the clearest possible picture of Great Bend High School, 1972. Individual student comments made during these sessions appear scattered throughout the story.

1972 was a year that had a very traditional graduation. It was a year of entering school hoping for the end of school to come. It's students were different; they were individuals, each with joys, anger, and anxieties all their own.

1972 was a year that high school students spoke out. They criticized, they supported, they tore down, they built-up.

"If I were crying and someone came to me and said, 'What's the matter?', I wouldn't say."

The students were active in everything, but it seemed to many that all the while few really gave a damn. It was a time when students spoke in lofty words of high ideals but the word meanings confused them and they often forgot.

1972 was a year when problems that bothered students were difficult to categorize. One of the greatest problems for students most certainly centered around boy and girl relations. They struggled with understanding each other's basic differences, both the obvious physical ones and the obscure emotional ones. Many boys feared that after two dates with a girl she would have their marriage nicely planned and ready for discussion on the third date. Girls quickly rejected this statement, but everyone admitted the big problem in marriage was choosing the right person.

"Sex" for the 1972 high school student did not carry the same "dirty-word" connotations that it had for many of the past generations. Something called "New Morality," was supposed to be developing, and sexual matters were openly and often very frankly discussed.

"Prom night was the nicest thing."

For the past three years the country had been observing an increased display of human sexual behavior and nudity in their famous "X" rated movies. Many adults felt these movies, which also contained "shocking" displays of violence and profanity (lots of murder, beatings, blood and four-letter words of Anglo-Saxon origin in technicolor and stereophonic sound) should not be seen by any person under 17. Each "objectionable" movie was rated with an "X" to alert parents to its contents. Of course, the kids could read also, and they thoroughly enjoyed sneaking into movie theaters across the county, soaking up all the "X" rated culture. While the adults who made movies grew richer and the adults who claimed moral degeneration was impending became more worried, the kids aruged that nothing was really changing. Sure, there were the "snakes," the "sluts" and the self-centered guys that got what they wanted, but this was also the time of good kids — young adults growing up.

1972 was a year where students became increasingly aware of the meaning of death. Several times that year the student body was touched by the passing of their friends. The pain was intense for many as they sensed the reality of their own impending death. Some students feared death, some had overcome their fear, and some had yet to face their own mortality.

1972 was the year that anxiety over the future worried the students. It seemed that they were thinking about girls, boys, next week's test "Did you hear about what happened. . ." college, marriage, deformed children and whether or not to cut their hair, all at the same time. They yearned for tomorrow and were afraid of what it would bring. It was a time when students feared the future might never be without undeclared Vietnam Wars, bloody Harlem riots, and senseless Kent State flare-ups. They dreamed of peace, of love, of joy, but were shocked by reality. They went to weekend "Keggers" where they tried to escape from seeing the world as it really was. Some created their own reality by using an assortment of hallucinogenic drugs.

"You can't tell when friendship is formed because all of a sudden it's there – and it's great."

1972 was a year with the school administration having things under control. They had yellow, white and pink slips to get students in and out of class. They assigned detention hours to students without Garden City blue, Dodge City red, and Great Bend black passes (or ws it Garden City green, Dodge City black, and Great Bend red?) It was a year for calling "Mommy" to make sure "Johnny" was at home sick, in bed, with nothing less serious than the bubonic plague. It was a time that students competed for the Most Classes Skipped and the Most Time Spent in Saturday Sessions awards. But in spite of these problems the administration was trying to aid the students in their education, just as many of the students really did try to learn. Both learned they had to give and take concerning their demands and desires, and they respected each other, at times.

"The nicest thing for me is when people care."

1972 was a year that security could be the greatest joy and loneliness and rejection would make the year unbearable. There was the agony of rejection through defeat seen in the tears of athletes whose dreams had been shattered in such a short space of time. But as dreams of championships vanished, athletes changed their attitudes, attitudes that began with envy and jealousy, and ended in dignity and togetherness as never seen before. It was a time when student and teacher alike questioned his sanity. "One out of three people," they were told, would sometime in his life require some form of treatment for emotional disorders.

"That's my major hang up – having people laugh at what's important to me."

1972 was a year which saw students growing up, accepting the world, and trying to help make it a better one. It was a time for their learning to take on new responsibilities and improve themselves through their successes and failures. For

"The hardest thing for me will be saying goodbye to my best friends."

1972 was a year that they were expected to act as adults, but were treated like children. Eighteen year-olds were nationally given the right to vote. They were expected to act as adults, which they were not, so they were put down. And since they were put down, they felt they had no chance to prove themselves and some grew even more discontent.

And then, for the writers of this article about 1972 events, a new, intriguing question arose: Who (or what) is now reading our words?

—Darrell Revell

"The greatest thing was the way school helped prepare me for life." – 1952

"The time was enjoyable, and the jokes made it even better." – 1932

"The better parts of the year centered around football, basketball, and baseball." – 1912

I'll leave now
Taking the remnants of knowledge
still clinging in my mind;
Taking the memory of friends and good times, now left behind.

I'll leave now
Remembering the forgotten assignments;
the ones left undone.
Remembering the helpful teachers and those never there when they need be.

I'll leave now
Realizing all that I've done was not enough;
just passing.
Realizing all that I could have done but didn't find the time or will for.

I'll leave now
But I'll never know if I'm remembered, never know how much I've forgotten.
I'll never know if someone misses me or feels an absence with my departure.

Maybe I, too, will slip quietly out the door —
one last time,
with only the walls to call me back:
The forgotten a result of mass cultivation and development;
a dismissed particle of education.
